BACK-TO-SCHOOL ISSUE

WE NOMINATE

Florence Burke, a distinguished teacher of American history and mathematics and a highly skilled administrator, who in the month ahead will be entering upon one of the most challenging posts ever offered to any Princeton educator, Acting Principal of Princeton High School in the academic year 1969-70. It is significant that Miss Burke, whose entire career has been in the High School, becomes the first woman ever to direct the High School which opened its doors in 1929 as one of the outstanding schools and "best-equipped school buildings in the entire State."

Miss Burke's approach to her assignment as head of a 1,700-student school, larger than most of the country's liberal arts colleges, is singularly refreshing. As she sees it: "This is going to be a team effort. I am going to need the cooperation of my fellow administrators and the whole High School staff, including clerks, custodians, teachers, cafeteria workers -- everybody. And, of course, the encouragement and support of students and the community. It's a major project; I just happen to be captain of the team at this point in time."

During this hot, clammy summer, as she has prepared for what could well be the most strenuous year ever on American school and college campuses, Miss Burke, an inveterate traveler, has limited herself to a skimpy week of vacation in the mountains of Southwestern Virginia and has concentrated on what she calls "my own home-work." While she is not yet anxious to make detailed statements about her plans and aspirations for the High School, she leaves with the press the strong impression that here is a thoroughly trained professional familiar with every facet of the job she has undertaken.

A native of Fairdale, Pa. (near Montrose), and the daughter of a well-known, extremely versatile Princeton dairy superintendent, Miss Burke attended grade school in Kingston (where she still makes her home), was graduated from Princeton High School with the Class of 1938 and joined the High School Faculty in 1943 after receiving her degree in mathematics at Douglass College. Her background includes teaching competence in two disciplines, a master's degree in student personnel administration from Columbia in 1950 and long years of experience as the High School's Assistant Principal and Dean of Girls.

In a very real sense the High School Class of 1966 anticipated the School Board's appointment by dedicating their yearbook to her. After citing her "tasteful guidance of school activities, her energetic direction of the Student Council, the hours and efforts she has devoted to school dances, her contagious enthusiasm for our projects," they concluded: "Because she has been a warm and understanding friend and advisor, because of the sparkle in her eye and because we like her, the Class of '66 dedicates this yearbook to Florence Burke."

For understanding all that is connoted by an "open-door policy" in a school embracing as many diverse elements as Princeton High School; for bringing to her many-sided administrative duties her "love of the classroom," for still wondering when some one is going to ask her about "my teaching license" and her qualifications for certification; she is TOWN TOPICS' nominee as PRINCETON'S SCHOOLS And Their Superintendent. Princeton's public schools will open on Wednesday, September 3, for 4,950 pupils 52 less than last year.

At over crowded old Princeton High, there will be about 1,775 including 96 seniors from Montgomery Township and Rocky Hill, last of their townspeople to attend the high school. 393 from West Windsor and 64 from Plainsboro, a trailing rear guard from a newly-merged school system which will phase out all its Princeton High students in the next couple of years.

The man who has these 5,000 kids on his mind is Superintendent Philip Eby McPherson, now beginning his third unbattled year with the Princeton Regional School system.

You can't say that a 32 year old man has aged in the job. But Phil McPherson has more heft than when he came to Princeton two years ago — you need weight to do battle — and he has mellowed, shifting his educational philosophy in the direction of greater flexibility in the approach to learning. ("We should never be seeking THE answer.")

He's a strong minded guy (enemies read "stubborn" — but he has tremendous respect for those members of the Princeton Regional School board who give him strongest support, and if one of them cannot support him on some issue, he always comes to a pause.

Up Beat. Above all, he likes to look on the positive side. Problems? Sure, but look at our accomplishments: we've strengthened the system's financial structure, built a really great Special Services department, shored up our maintenance work . . .

"That phrase 'rubber stamp' has been used," he smiles, "and people say the superintendent gets everything he wants. It isn't so. I have to work hard for majority support from the board on major issues, and what people don't realize is that many issues never make it to a vote because I just withdraw my proposal, knowing I won't win."

He reflects for a moment: "I know that a minority on the board regards ME as a problem. Well, if we reach a point where I'm not getting along with most of the board, we'd part company. I don't believe in tenure for a superintendent. I'm expendable just like any elected board member.

Problems. "Sure the board and the superintendent have problems. Differing views don't rise to the surface until you start dealing with hard questions, and if we didn't deal with hard questions, we would not be addressing ourselves to the real issues.

"This line between policy and administration — you can't delineate the two sharply. The board should be deciding what the school system's goals are.

and holding me responsible for carrying them out.

"But some board members ask me what the goals should be, then try to carry them out themselves! So each of us pushes over the line. Maybe I intrude, and give my ideas too often — I shouldn't insist on my goals over theirs. . .

"The Princeton community has to share responsibility for this! After all, board members behave the way they think the town wants them to behave.

"I have an idea — suppose a school board member in your friend. When you meet that board member at a cocktail party or in the supermarket, ask your friend, 'Where are the Princeton schools going?'

"Don't ask about bus problems or complain about what teacher said to Susie, but ask that board member, 'what's the future of our school system in terms of broad goals'?"

He smiles and shrugs, "Well, it was just an idea. But when people keep asking specific questions about buses or whatever, the board member can't help feeling that's what he should be thinking about."

Some Princeton residents are uneasy about arguments and hot disagreements that may take place secretly during the board's executive sessions. "Maybe," the superintendent admits "we owe the public more public sessions, where these differences can show up."

Specifics. Now, some of those specifics:

Last spring, black parents demanded 30 more black teachers on the faculty by this fall. "We've more than doubled our current black staff, although we haven't reached the precise goal the parents set. But we recruited more than I thought we could! Our faculty now looks as bi-racial as the student body does. We have more than 30 professionals, plus the custodial staff.

Sensitivity? "We're starting our fourth year of our Title III staff education program. Teachers meet once a week, and also spend 40 minutes each week with one child — playing, telling stories, talking. Teachers use this experience in comparing notes with other teachers about how to work better with children.

"You could probably call that 'sensitivity'," he comments. "I doubt that we'll ever have required sensitivity-type programs or racial sensitivity programs for the whole staff. But it is possible that most teachers will get involved in some kind of program, under a varied set-up, so that a teacher can have the right experience for him, while somebody else has another kind of experience."

Progress. About those positive signs of progress:

Dr. McPherson says that under Ronald Novak, the whole financial operation has been strengthened and tightened. Money, for example, used to be controlled centrally by the superintendent. Now, principals, the curriculum director, the chief librarian and so on, control their own expenses. Teachers were told in detail last spring about the budget process for their own school. "We want experienced teachers to be knowledgeable about the budget," Dr. McPherson explains.

In another move toward financial strength and firmness, the school board now receives a full page of explanation on each line-item in the budget. "It's a much sounder operation."

Special Services are under Dr. Charles Huchet, whom Dr. McPherson describes as "probably the best in the country." When the superintendent came, two years ago, this department had no director.

Special Services includes reading, speech and hearing specialists; social workers who relate home problems to the kid who can't learn; people who know how to diagnose learning difficulties.

"These learning problems hit every kind of family," the superintendent shakes his head. "It's your kids this year, somebody else's next year."

Open Up. In learning, Dr. McPherson has become convinced in the last two years that flexibility at the elementary level is vital.

"The more we open it up, the way they're doing in England, the more kids can learn. We've got to get away from standardization: this - is - the - week - we - learn - two - plus - two. People don't learn that way. Curriculum for curriculum's sake doesn't interest me any more," he shrugs. "The test is: we've got kids with problems. That shows us we've got our own problem-solving to do."

"Our teachers in Princeton are cautiously progressive, and I think that's a good balance," he nods. "There are two things I think are more important than anything else: Princeton should invest a lot of time and money so teachers can improve themselves. This is more important than curriculum or buying TV sets. In fact, it's the best investment we can make.

"The second thing is, giving kids choices of things to learn and letting them learn, but not with adults abdicating responsibility."

What's Ahead? The superintendent sees issues in Princeton's crystal ball:

Sensitivity training, sex education (he'll report on that early in the fall), racial problems that haven't been solved, a long range Master Plan examining the need for new buildings and facilities and, of course, that budget.

"The next budget can't be as tight as this one," he warns, "because teachers' salaries come up for review this year. Teachers will make a strong case for competitive salaries and that will have major impact."

And some of those teachers may leave. Dr. McPherson admits "we've lost some good people," but he adds, "we've picked up more.

"The better a school system gets in terms of talent, the more turnover you get. We've got to get used to that fact."

But for this year, the turnover has turned, and the talent will all be on hand September 3, eager to go.

Ready, parents?

Watch February

February's school elections may be crucial for Princeton, says Superintendent Philip E. McPherson.

Three long-time board members—one-third of the membership — will go off the board if they decide not to run for re-election. They are Dr. Harvey Rothberg, Mrs. George Fremon and Mrs. Bonnie Wagner.

"These three have been key, influential people," Dr. McPherson points out, "their departure could mean that this coming election is the most important decision on education in Princeton since merger. The outcome could have vital implications in the years ahead for children and teachers."

TOPICS Of The Town

WHAT IS WEDNESDAY?

Program Day. School starts Wednesday, September 3, and the Regional Schools' "Wednesday Program" starts that first day.

This means that all children will be dismissed from school at 1 p.m., right after lunch. Teachers and community participants in the Wednesday Program will meet that afternoon in the first of four successive Home Group meetings: September 3, 10, 17 and 24. Only three other Home Group meetings will be held all year.

No program has been set up for the children of working mothers, as last year. There will be no planned program in the schools for any children, although various programs will undoubtedly develop during the year, as teachers decide what their work projects will be.

On the Town. However, community agencies and individuals are beginning to respond. The Studio-on-the-Canal and Creative Crafts will both offer special Wednesday classes. The Princeton Ballet Society will again have its special classes. The Girl Scouts will have a Wednesday Program, too.

The YWCA has expanded its muscles to offer swim classes or water ballet, typing, sewing or dry-land ballet. The Princeton Study Center will have tutoring in every school building from 1-2:30 on Wednesdays. (Volunteer tutors are needed.)

A directory of community activities for youngsters may be assembled this fall.

The Wednesday Program welcomes participants from the town, and citizens who want to sign up should call 924-5600 and ask for Mrs. Elaine Solomon. She's coordinator for the program.

What Is It? For newcomers to town — teachers launched the Wednesday Program in the spring semester last year for the dual purpose of professional self-improvement, and improvement of the schools.

"Indirectly," observes Mrs. Solomon, "the program is for the kids — to make the other four and one-half days in school more effective and meaningful for them."

Last spring's program was fluid. This fall's will have more structure, for people who want it. Other teachers may prefer freedom to work on their own.

Participants themselves will decide what they want to do. But a couple of courses have already been planned. At the teachers' request, Alaine Jass, reading specialist, will lead a workshop. Henry Drewry, former history teacher at the high schol, may give a course in Afro-American studies. That one hasn't been fully worked out yet.

On the individual side, William Bux of the high school's business education department, wants to spend Wednesdays teaching a group of students a program language, taking them to a computer at Rider College and allowing them to play out the program.

He suggests that data processed by the kids could help various departments in the school system.

I See the Light! Mr. Bux, incidentally, is an example of the zealous convert. He has spent this summer working on the Wednesday Program with Mrs. Solomon. But last year, he had strong reservations about "Wednesdays."

"I'm not alone in this: there is definitely stronger staff support now, than there was early last spring," he states.

Another individual Wednesday project comes from William Karch, manager of facilities services, who has been working out a program to help his custodial and maintenance staff upgrade their skills so they can get higher pay.

Sample results from the Wednesday program so far:

- A new approach to science teaching. (See photo caption, page 4.)

- A new high school course for students who might not think they could qualify for a regular commercial course. Developed by Mrs. Catherine Avery, Mrs. Gloria Seitz and Miss Mary Perpetua, the course offers specially designed instruction in typing, filing, inventory and business English.

- A new fourth-fifth grade program at Johnson Park involving five teachers, three of whom have applied to the state for a "mini-grant" to carry out their ideas for a more flexible approach to learning.

WEDNESDAY PROGRAM: Frank Strohaber, PHS science teacher spent Wednesdays last spring puting chemistry lab. instructions on tape and making "how to do it" slides so that students who are shy about asking questions, can play the tape again and again whenever they like, and look at the slides to see just how it goes. Student John Robbins is shown taking a melting point. Nine students worked with Mr. Strohaber and his associates in the project. (Photo by Robert Myers of the PHS biology department.)

"I have faith in the potential of our staff and its talent," states Mrs. Solomon.

"This is a test year for the Wednesday Program," says Superintendent Philip E. McPherson. "It's up to the staff, and if they meet the challenge, this could be the most exciting sign of the future for the school system. If not enough teachers see the challenge, it could be a wash out. It needs energy and excitement."

Wednesday Evenings. Members of this lively nit shout met all during July, about 11 of them. The group includes school staff and residents some black and some white.

From this group last spring, came an eight point manifesto to the board on race. This summer, the group presented a clarification of those proposals to Dr. McPherson.

The document, five pages long, asks for establishment of a Human Relations Council to listen to parents, students and teachers; programs designed to increase sensitivity, required of school staff, but offered in such variety that people could choose what fit them best; emphasis on guidance rather than testing from elementary school guidance counsellors, a committee of two black parents appointed to work with the high school guidance department; re evaluation of course selections of black high school students, a new program, training and using teacher aids.

The proposals will be the basis for talks with Dr. McPherson, and for Wednesday Evening discussions during the coming year. This group will begin later in the fall than the regular Wednesday Program.

"The Wednesday Program isn't a panacea," Mrs. Solomon warns, "but it is an avenue for problem solving. It's a kind of model of what we'd like the schools themselves to be like – a place where every kid has a maximum amount of help in learning."

We'd be honored!
TO LEND YOU MONEY FOR ANY WORTHWHILE PURPOSE

All too often families and businesses get the impression that borrowing money is a one-way street. That only loan applicants need be checked and interviewed and scrutinized. We don't feel that way at Princeton's First National. We think you should feel free to ask us some questions and give us a careful going-over before you apply for a loan, because where you borrow makes a big, big difference. Stop in today at any of our offices (there are Loan Officers waiting to be looked over at all three) and ask about a loan. Whether you need money for a new car, a major appliance, home improvements, business purposes or whatever, we'd be happy to serve you. And honored, too.

OPEN AIR CLOSES

With "Camelot." The Villa Park Players will close the season at the Washington Crossing Open Air Theatre and at the same time, disband their own acting troupe.

"Camelot" is the vehicle chosen for the dual farewell. Carlo Altemarle will be King Arthur, Ricky Vanschevin will be Guinevere, Richard Bossman will portray Lancelot. Other members of the cast are Rick Jachetti as Mordred and Jim Hutchinson as King Pelinore. Carl DiDonato is musical director. Anthony Petito Jr. is director and producer.

The musical will be played in the park this Thursday, Friday and Saturday and again August 29-30. The set is the castle that served as background earlier in the year for the Mercer Hospital Fete.

The Villa Park Players was established exactly five years ago, on August 30, 1964 to provide learning theatrics for teenagers.

Since its founding, it has mounted 11 productions and played to more than 10,000 spectators. Many of its young members will draw on their years of Villa Park experience to continue in the theatre. Mr. Petito will join the professional drama school of the Neighborhood Players, New York. Jim Perry, a member of the chorus, will enter Westminster Choir College on a scholarship, and is signed up for the Merv Griffin Show in September. Mr. Altomarle has a full scholarship at Rider College.

SPOTLIGHT ON McCARTER

For Children. "The Thwarting of Baron Bolligrew," a play whose villain is a dragon breathing real (real!) fire, will tour this fall under the banner of McCarter's Children's Theatre.

A wandering troupe of eight professional actors will take the play into the five southern New Jersey counties for six weeks. Project Spotlight, a Title II program, provided the invitation to McCarter's actors.

John Lithgow, young director whose "As You Like It" was a charm of last season's repertory in Princeton, is directing the play for young audiences.

He describes "Thwarting" as a "zestful fantasy" with lots of breath-taking stage effects, colorful masks for the actors and that dragonian exhalation of real, real fire.

The play, by Robert Bolt, was first performed four years ago by the Royal Shakespeare Company, and thousands of children saw it in London's Aldwych Theatre.

Original music, described as Dixieland Medieval by its composer, will be featured throughout. Grady Clarkson will be stage manager and Narrator.

'THE PRICE' AT NEW HOPE

Ends Regular Season. "The Price," Arthur Miller's recent play, which began a two-week run on Monday, will be the concluding show of the regular summer season at the Bucks County Playhouse in New Hope, Pa. However, the playhouse will host four preview performances, in repertory, of "Hamlet" and "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," from September 4 to 6, prior to a national tour.

"The Price," which just completed a two season run on Broadway, centers around the relationship of two brothers, one a success and the other a failure, who have not seen each other in years. The encounter brings up old resentments and fears with one overwhelming question—was the price too high that each has paid for his life's decision?

Featured in the cast are Michael Fairman as Victor Franz, the embittered policeman, Roe Mc Clanahan as his wife, Howard Honig as Walter Franz, the successful surgeon; and Roger DeKoven as Gregory Solomon, the wise octogenarian furniture dealer.

The pairing of the two English masterpieces, "Hamlet" and "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," marks a theatrical first. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern" recently completed a lengthy Broadway run, winning the New York Drama Critics's and Tony Awards as "Best Play of the Year." The part of Hamlet will be played by veteran Shakespearean actor Robert Burr, understudy to Richard Burton's Hamlet.

For tickets and information, call (215) 862-2041, or write Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa.

MISS WOODSTOCK?

Try the Music Circus. If you missed the entertainment at the Woodstock Music and Art Fair at Bethel, N.Y. last weekend, because you could only get within six miles of the bandstand, try the Lambertville Music Circus the next couple of weeks.

Sunday at 7:30 p.m. under the big tent, something they wished they had at Woodstock, the Vanilla Fudge, will blast forth with its own brand of rock music. From its debut at the Village Theatre in New York, the psychedelic symphonic rock group has established itself in the vanguard of contemporary music style.

Carmine Appici on the drums, versatile Tim Bogert on the buss and sax, clarinet, flute and piano, Vinnie Martell on lead guitar; and Mark Stein, lead vocalist, who doubles on the organ, comprise the membership.

On Tuesday at 8:30, the teen group, some of whom were not even born when Woody Herman blew his first notes, will give a way to the prominent leader and his Thundering Herd. With a beautiful nostalgia for the past and a style that captures the excitement of the new contemporary jazz, Woody Herman articulates his sound to an audience that knows no generation gap.

One of the hottest groups in the industry whose appeal reaches to both generations, the Cowsills, will appear Friday, August 29, at 8:30 p.m. Several hit single-records including their rendition of "Hair," and six albums have pushed this family of nine into national recognition.

Finally, on Saturday, August 30, at 9:45 p.m., Count Basie and his band will be in for a one night stand, with their own special style that has kept the Count at the top of the heap for more than three decades. Tickets for all shows may be obtained by writing to the Music Circus, Lambertville, New Jersey or calling the box office at 397-1500.

VARIED PROGRAM LISTED

In Fine Arts at Rider. Rider College this fall will present a diversified Fine Arts program with offerings ranging from international art to the traditional college chorus Christmas concert.

The Modern Jazz Quartet, long one of the nation's leading musical groups, will present a concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday, September 16, to inaugurate the fall program. Andy Warhol, the controversial pop artist and underground film producer, will visit the campus on October 30, lecturing in Alumni Gymnasium.

Rider's well known Theatre '59 group plans two shows during the fall. The mirthful musical, "Little Mary Sunshine," will be presented Octo

YOUNG IDEAS

And Quiet Flair. Clayton's in Palmer Square is awash these days in campus-bound clothes. Swingy little skirts with a flurry of pleats; flirty-fringe ponchos; bulky, over-grown sweaters, shapely tunics to wear solo or with hip-riding pants, and tartans enough for a clan gathering.

There are leather pouches that swing from your shoulder, shrimp earrings, long sashes and chain belts with jewel-tone scarves woven through.

Carla Schafer of Jefferson Road, who returns to Butler University as a junior this fall, discussed Clayton's young clothes the other day with a shy, infectious enthusiasm. A leggy blonde with a dreamer's slow smile, she has worked at the store every summer for the past four years. Naturally, she uses the proprietary "we" and "our."

"We have the John Meyer vests that go with The Look this year," she says, ducking over to a file of beautiful, textured wools and tweeds. She holds up a rust tweed tunic cut with Meyer's typical off-hand elegance . . . slimly fitted, slightly flared, with five small buttons marching down to the hem.

Wear it everywhere this fall — with a smashing scarf, or a pointy-collared shirt. Wear it as a dress, or add the skirt or bell bottoms that match.

"And I am drooling over this," she says next, softly patting a three-piece pant-suit in the warm gold-green tweed called "gorse." It's a versatile starter for individualists, with its long-length, double-breasted jacket cut with wide Edwardian lapels, and matching A-line skirt and hip-huggers.

The whole John Meyer of Norwich collection is fresh and fun: Short-sleeved plaid dresses cut shirtwaist style with long tie belts that match ($36), and high-necked plaid jumpers with wide belts held by leather thongs.

For mixing it up, a tailored jumper in camel, double-breasted, ovaled out at the throat. There are low patch pockets as a quiet sort of finish. It's an A-flare — no belt — with great possibilities for accessories. ($35).

Wonderful hunting tartans in pure wool are at Clayton's made up in suits, long-sleeved dresses and kilts by Highland Queen, a Canadian firm. The fabric is as soft as challis.

Among the suits: a red plaid, self-buttoned high to the neck, garnished with a long, long tie-scarf that buttons on at the back of the neck. Two patch pockets. (sizes 10-16). Among the dresses — all shirtwaist style — a beautiful black-and-white plaid, crossed with a flame red bar. Another navy with white and deep blue cross bars. ($50).

Carla flicked the knife pleats of a kilt, showing off the marvelous autumn colors of Canada's "Maple Leaf" tartan. Others are the traditional Scots plaids, and all are held with the usual big pin at the side fringe.

And if you want a fresh approach to the kilt, there's John Meyer's red kilt that wraps around and buckles on both sides of the front. It's a shorty, too.

In Donegal tweed, so new this year, a beautifully tailored coat that is "almost like a long shirt," as Carla pointed out. Four patch pockets in front, two kick pleats in back below the half-belt. It is about as long as a boy's shirt — "7/8ths-length" to coat manufacturers — and with it come matching bell bottom pants. The tweed is brown flecked with white and orange.

Clayton's has lots of little skirts in soft, fleecy wools and nubby tweeds. And also the long, sweater-vests, made with V-necks and patch pockets. Knitted in a bulky cable stitch, the vests are an important part of the season's look. You can have them in most any PHS JUNIOR Marguerite Nelson, over by the love-in cottons at The Fabric Shop, says that about three out of every five girls sew these days. Right now, "purple is the thing!" (See it's New To Us.) Marguerite is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Nelson of Hun Road.

It's New To Us

color, it seemed as we scanned the supply.

In no trouble, packable Banlon, Clayton's carries knit tops in narrow, tight stripes. Some in soft shades, others bold and eye-stopping. The style is cute neck, of course. ($9 & $10).

You'll also find thin wool knit tops in stripes ($15) with solid color skirts to match the predominant stripe. And among the tapered shirts, as Carla says, the ones to buy are the deep point collar types — some tucked like a dress shirt (great with a tartan skirt), others in textured weaves.

For rainwear, Carla is inclined toward the transparent plastics as they are "truly waterproof and your clothes show through. You can roll them up and pack them. . ." There's one in clear plastic, edged in white at the front and around the big patch pockets. ($). In opaque white, how about a cape? Both are attractive.

In the miscellaney of accessories, a wine and navy wool poncho, fringed and warm. The intricate pattern of Aztec like design is used dingonally. And shoulder bags by Davey of Worcester, Mass. Most are adjustable, and they come in calf or suede.

The belts include several styles with the tortoise shell look, and there are lots of chains and colored leathers. (Up to about $8). Slithery scarves and long sashes for dramatic color effects. And a variety of scarf rings.

EVEN LOVE-IN PRINTS

At The Fabric Shop. There has always been the advantage of two buyers for The Fabric Shop on Chambers Street — one a mite conservative, the other a mite avant garde. This summer there has been a spokesman for the younger set, too.

The owner-buyers are sisters, Mrs. Eleanor Nelson and Mrs. Lucille Nelson, and it has been young Marguerite Nelson, nearly sixteen, who has been on hand at the shop all summer, no doubt putting in a vote when the fabric salesmen stopped in.

Marguerite, who will be a junior at Princeton High School this year, told us in her blithe, bright way, about the fabrics that get you right into the action.

"For the very beginning of school," she says, "the new love in prints in cotton. That's to finish off the summer with." As she fluffs out a bolt or two, you are hit in the eye with wonderful, strong, hot colors, psychedelic designs, abstracts and, on some "Love," "Love," "Love" scattered passionately over the cloth.

There are dark background cottons, too, for fall — with bright prints to let people know you're around. Hot pinks and purples, for instance, against black. And a few calico prints. These are light weight cottons, 45" wide, Perma Press finish for easy care, and $1.49 yd.

In the heavier cottons, strip ed calicos with black yellow and red patterns or a dazzling orange rust and dark - brown. And there are paisley prints, some with the purples that call to youth; and floral prints such as the black with a mite roseopie gold daisy. All 45" wide, priced at $1.98 to $2.49 yd.

Marguerite paused by an array of pin stripes and Glen plaids in wool and synthetics. "These," she said meditatively, "are for the conventional Bonnie & Clyde things — a vest and skirt, or a tunic-type thing with a V-neck."

She went on to a shelf of handsome quilted cottons in bright and youthful calico prints. "These go well with all solid color blouses," she offered. "You make them up in jumpers with the folded braid trim. They're easy to sew and easy to care for . . ."

As quick and colorful as a hummingbird, Marguerite hovers over the plaid woolens. "You can get a skirt out of about three quarters of a yard," she says, showing you both loose and tight weaves in all sorts of plaids. "These are cute for school — to coordinate with sweaters — and they don't soil easily."

We noticed such new color combinations as white and grey with a pea green accent, and tartans we'd be blessed if we could identify. Some are 54 inched, others not. They all run 60" wide at about $4.50 yd. or thereabouts.

Marguerite showed us moire for "semi formal dances and bog occasions." There was a soft yellow, a maize, a hot pink and a pale green, waiting to be made up into dirndl skirts that the girls all love and wear with crepe blouses, "or maybe into short dresses that are a little fancy," she speculated.

"For the long pants-skirts — these are worn quite a bit — we have silk screen prints with good purples and greens." The prints are truly beautiful. We lingered over some with white backgrounds until Marguerite took us gently in hand. "You want the darker backgrounds and, say, a big paisley." The younger set wears its pants-skirts with long-sleeved crepe blouses, or with blouses that have "the wet look."

Marguerite likes the jersey softie made by Travel Talk in Pucci prints. These have gorgeous jewel tones — some made with a border print, others are scalloped patterns, still others are variations on the paisley. "The girls buy this more than the Banlon," Marguerite says. "The women buy the Banlon jersey."

The girls' choice is a light weight jersey, which they make up without a lining. The fabric is completely drip-dry and "not seasonal — but all year round."

Holding out a long length of a Pucci print, Marguerite adds, "You make them up in dresses that don't have a lot of seams or bias. The prints look cut up as it is!"

Looking around the Fabric Shop, she gives advance notice to the girls who sew: "Velveteens will be coming in next month — something like 20 bolts of it — including purple." She tells you about the thick and thin wale corduroys near the counter in a dramatic splash of autumn colors.

About three out of five girls sew, Marguerite estimates. "We do the easy things, the things that you can make a mistake on." Thinking about the fall styles, she gives a quick rundown on youthful fashion:

"Skirts are fuller and not quite as short . . . big sleeves are in for blouses and dresses. Belts are in, waistbands are wider on some skirts — and the dirndl is definitely making the scene.

"Now that the girls can wear pants to school, bells would be great made in the pin stripe wools or the plaids. They're not hard to make, and a really good fit isn't hard to manage. And the pants-skirts are easy — just two more seams than a skirt . . ."

We think that Marguerite Nelson is the Fabric Shop's new secret weapon.

You, Too, Can Realize Your Leadership Potential

"With the potential, motivation and determination that he possesses, his contribution to the program could not have been greater in what he accomplished on his own. He made a film, spent hours editing and taping the music to accompany it, took 35 mm pictures for possible publication, suggested and organized a trip for the Columbia Broadcasting System. His activities exceed those of any single member of the program."

Reluctant young hands have laid aside the movie cameras, teen age tutors have had final reading sessions with the little kids who wanted help, the Yankee Stadium trip seems like years ago.

It all adds up to the end of Princeton's first Martin Luther King Leadership Program.

For six weeks this summer, 21 high school age students (11 boys, 10 girls) took part in the full time program receiving five semester credits at Princeton High and $6 per day.

Half way through, they were joined by 24 Middle School students (16 boys, eight girls). All the youngest ones were black; four fifths of the teens were black.

"The younger kids were brought into the program because we wanted to develop the leadership qualities in the older ones," explains Donald Blankenbush, PHS teacher who ran the program with two other faculty members, Marvin Trotman and Franklin Dippery.

Several goals were listed by Kenneth Michael, former principal of Princeton High: "Build self-confidence and community pride," were two of them. "Satisfaction from helping others," was another.

"To foster an understanding of society and the individual's place in it" — that was high on the list. To provide cultural and recreational experience not readily available otherwise and to improve academic skills like reading, computation and verbal expression, were important, too.

In short, it was designed for the kind of kids who respond to "Upward Bound" programs.

"It was a delight to see her gain confidence in her own abilities. Her strong desire to know more about her surroundings, her concern that things were being done and going correctly, make her the ideal student to work with. Her work with the younger students was laudable. Children look to her for guidance."

Two things stand out in the program: the importance of the audio-visual equipment, and the great success of the various trips.

"We used tape recorders, movie cameras, slide projectors and so on, valued at about $1,500," Mr. Blankenbush says. "That audio-visual equipment became a tremendous vehicle for instruction. Kids of high school age were eager to teach the younger ones how to use the equipment, and to help them out."

The equipment was used extensively by all students all day long, but especially in the evening. "In fact, we had a waiting list for equipment use in the evening hours," Mr. Blankenbush reports

"Her contribution was the positive attitude took on most occasions. She usually felt she should be doing something constructive. She sought advice from her instructors."

Audio visual was both a passive and an active tool. Students like the young man at the head of this article, used audio visual for their own projects. (He worked on his film intensively, by the way, days after the program had ended.)

Two girls took Langston Hughes' book "Black Misery" and, using a special machine, made slides from the book's cartoons and showed them to the group.

A boy who has trouble reading, found he could prepare a commentary on his own slide show, and read it off.

A SATISFYING SUMMER: "Satisfaction from helping others" was one of the goals of this summer's Martin Luther King Leadership Program for students from Princeton High and the Middle School. Older teens were tutors, chaperones, instructors and just plain friends to the younger enrollees. Top: Sharon McGriff (at left with white hat) and Pam Wells (center) shepherd a group of the young ones. Bottom: James Bufkins and Richard Jackson take time out from one of the teen activities. (Photos by students in the Martin Luther King Program.)

Then on rainy days, the audio-visual tools were turned to other uses. Students watched the film "Weapons of Gordon Parks" and "Arethea Franklin, Soul Singer." They even laughed at the ancient "Our Gang" silent films, with no apparent concern at the racial stereotypes in those old movies.

They recorded their trips in still and motion picture film, and the instructors hope to get the kids back soon for an editing session.

And the trips!

"The kids decided where they wanted to go, organized the trip and chaperoned the younger ones," Mr. Blankenbush explains.

A large majority of the students wanted to visit the New Jersey State Prison. Since group visits aren't allowed by prison authorities, the students went instead to the Mercer County Youth House, a home for kids in trouble who don't have proper family life in their own homes. Twenty-five of the youngsters went on that trip.

"She is a definite and positive model for others to follow. She has a deep compassion for people less advantaged than she. Her desire to help a younger student's reading problem led her to seek possible solution from adults . . . She needs to be reassured that she is doing a job well because she is working with people and finds it difficult to see if any progress is being made."

Almost as many — 22 — went on the trip to the State Police Academy. Three trips for 34 kids were made to the New Jersey Cultural Center. Eleven youngsters went to the State Legislature and 12 visited Trenton's Street Academies.

They walked over to the New School for Music Study to look at Ulli Steltzer's photography exhibit — maybe to shine up their own techniques with a camera.

"She should learn to take more initiative on her own, rather than wait to be prodded. She would probably do much better in school if she did."

But it wasn't all solemn. A picnic at Bowman's Tower attracted 21 youngsters and produced a charming through-the-trees photograph of a couple on a park bench, shot from the very top of the tower.

Canoe trips — 43 took part in those three adventures — a bike hike that ended with lunch at Educational Testing Service, lunch one day at Gino's ("The Place to Go"), a quiet fishing expedition for half a dozen youngsters and of course, softball, basketball, volleyball, bowling, swimming at Community Park and a record dance.

"His dealing with younger students was exemplory. He broke up a disagreement between younger students of a baseball game and counselled the boy who seemed to be on the disadvantaged end of the disagreement. He set on example to the other students by saving some of his earnings from the program."

"A couple of things marred the program, but we learned, even from these," Mr. Blenkenbush reports, "Five of the high-school kids didn't make the Seaside Heights trip. They'd been told they were expected to help chaperone the younger ones, but they disappeared right after they got their paychecks."

The instructors decided to give the erring students a choice: pay back the $6 for that day, or lose the five credits for the course. The rest of the students were polled. Most of the boys said "Take away the credits!" Most of the girls said, "Give them a choice."

All parents of the students agreed, however, that paying back the $6 was the thing to do.

The audio-visual equipment, by the way, is in excellent working condition, in spite of the working-over it got during the six weeks. But Mr. Blan-kenhush, Mr. Trotman and Mr. Dippery have an anguished plea for next year: give us a locked storage area! The outbuildings where the students met, couldn't be locked and everything had to be lugged into the main PHS office. A small slide-sorter, a fan and a camera were stolen. One of the girls discovered a tape recorder late on Friday afternoon, carefully hid it under a mound of papers for weekend safety and then called an instructor to tell him what she'd found.

"He has great ideas, but fails to follow through in most cases. What may seem irresponsibility on his part, is nathing more than forgetfulness."

Next year? Of course!

This year's program was financed with $6,000 from the Princeton Regional Board of Education and $3,500 of Title II money. Mr. Blankenbush hopes for $12,000 next year; he had to cut the program short two days because money ran out.

"I'd like to see a college-level counsellor, preferably black, for every 12 students," Mr. Blankenbush recommends, "and follow-up during the school year, like an auditovisual project, a trip of some other educational activity."

The italicized comments in this article are from personal letters written by the instructors to each parent about each Martin Luther King participant. Some were not quite so full of praise, but the instructors are sure that every student got something out of the program.

UNIVERSITY IS READY

For the First Cords. Princeton University is preparing to welcome a small, but powerful, minority group — 150 girls.

About 130 freshmen, including the already famous Miss Bikini of Long Branch, will check in for orientation week on September 8. Only 90 freshman were originally expected.

Pyne Hall will house all of the 178 women students — the freshmen, the transfers to the upper classes; a few Critical Language students ("criters" to the undergraduate) who enroll for a year or two on leave from other institutions, and the handful of graduate students.

There's a new assistant dean, Mrs. Halcey Bohen, who settled down to her desk on Monday, primarily in charge of the girls and their problems. She is the wife of Frederick Bohen, formerly of the Woodrow Wilson School.

And in freshly-scraped, painted and re-decorated Pyne Hall, there is an attractive small apartment for the young faculty couple who will serve as advisors.

Considerable thought and elan has gone into the preparations for the girls. Lights are sprouting all over the campus walkways; more mirrors have been supplied for Pyne Hall — and ironing boards.

A group of women served as advisors for the arrangements at Pyne, and such details as traverse rods for curtains are already in place. The furniture ordered for the girls is smaller, "and this saves space," a staff member points out.

Some of the rooms are singles, others are suites, with a livingroom-study between the bedrooms .There are fireplaces that work and decrator plans call for coordinated color from divans to walls to windows.

The girls will have their meals in Commons and Wilcox Hall. Thomas Root, the director of food services and dormitories, has been pondering girl-suitable diets. Bernard Gavin, associate director, has been the on-the-job manager at the dormitory.

The girls — for one year — will be excused from gym, although there will be programs for all interested women students. The problem is that the girls' locker room will not be installed in Dillon Gym until next year — if the construction schedule holds. One of the advantages of Pyne Hall is that it is right next to the gym, and the girls can go back to their rooms to shower and change.

After the initial preparations for the girls are completed, the University seems ready to treat them just as it does the boys. The 24-page orientation booklet to be distributed to all freshmen and new students contains few reference to women students. It does note, however, that "this year's women students have no fashions to follow. They will be the pace-setters."

Orientation Week will begin with a meeting at 10:30 a.m. on Monday, September 8, in Alexander Hall. It will be an informal session, with talks by President Goheen, Dean Ernest Gordon, John T. Osander, director of admission; Edward Sullivan, dean of the college; and by the president of the Undergraduate Assembly. A meeting of the girls alone will be held that evening in McCosh 10.

PDS FACULTY CHANGE: Sanford B. Bing (right), former director of admission at the Hun School, will head the Princeton Day upper school this year, replacing Herbert McAneny, acting head since 1965 when Miss Fine's School and Princeton Country Day were merged into PDS. Mr. McAneny, who was a key member of the PCD faculty for 34 years, will teach English and direct the dramatics program

BING FOR McANENY

At P.D.S. Sanford B. Bing, a member of the Hun School faculty for the past nine years, has settled into his new responsibilities as head of the PDS upper school.

He takes over from Herbert McAneny, a much admired and loved figure in Princeton private school education for nearly 40 years.

And he'd be the first to say, it's a tough act to follow. In the office that Mr. McAneny has not quite cleared out of hockey sticks, boxes and memorabilia, Mr. Bing says frankly, "Officially, I'll be head of upper school administration, but unofficially I'm looking forward to help from him."

Young, husky, and with a penchant for golf, Mr. Bing is a chemist. At Hun he served as director of admission, dean of students, science teacher and housemaster. He coached soccer and baseball.

A graduate of Lafayette, he holds a master's degree from Rutgers and has done graduate work in chemistry at UCLA.

In a letter, Headmaster Douglas O. McClure notified parents of the change. "As difficult as it is to conceive, Mr. Herbert McAneny is approaching retirement age.

"At his suggestion, we have decided that this is the time to appoint a separate head of the upper school who can benefit from Mr. McAneny's experience while making it possible for him to return to full time English teaching and directing the dramatics program. Princeton Day School is extremely fortunate to have a person of Mr. Bing's experience and qualification as part of its faculty."

"Significant Changes." Among the upper school innovations for this year, are three that Mr. Bing terms "significant changes."

"The first is an attempt to get the students truly involved in the function of the school for the welfare of the school. We don't have a student council form of government now, and, assuming it does, the council, made up of elected students and faculty."

The new council is expected to serve as a tool for free dialogue with the students. One of its first tasks is to draw up a reasonable and workable definition of student dress and appearance. And parents have been asked to contribute their views.

The second innovation is that the school day is now divided into 14 periods of a half hour each, from 8:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. "Some classes, such as an introductory language course and certain mathematics courses, require frequent meetings but not lengthy meetings," Mr. Bing explains. "A class will have double periods on one day, single periods on another."

Taking his own planned chemistry classes as an example: "We will meet for an hour on Monday, not at all on Tuesday, for a half hour on Wednesday and for an hour on Friday. This is 2½ hours of class instead of 3 hours a week.

"But our chemistry lab is open all day Tuesdays, Wednesday and Thursdays — and a student comes in when he has a free period. An instructor is always on hand. The students' free time varies — sometimes it's in the morning, other days it's in the afternoon."

The net effect of the new schedule, termed a "modified modular schedule" by educators, offers a realistic use of student and faculty time. It provides more opportunity for teachers to meet with students. And it is geared to teach students to budget their time.

The third change, which affects the entire school, is the adoption of a three-term school year. The terms fit neatly into the vacation periods; the first running until Christmas, the second until the March recess, and the third to the close of the school year.

Summer Project. "We also hope to continue the enrichment project that was held here during the summer," Mr. Bing adds. "We'd like to continue it during the entire school year.

"The people who have been participating in it are making such suggestions as continuing work with the computer, regular meetings with the Trenton youngsters involved, and working in general, toward a

New Approach to Student Government

Princeton Day School has written off the traditional form of student council government in its upper school instead, an elected faculty-student committee called the Community Council begins operations this fall.

Eleven students were elected to the new government body last spring; the faculty named five from its own ranks. Power of veto over the Community Council rulings lies in the hands of the headmaster, Douglas O. McClure.

Officers, all from the student body, are Lewis Bowers, president; Linda McCandless, vice president, and Neil Rosenthal, secretary-treasurer.

Faculty members serving are Mitchell Bronk, Huson R. Gregory, Steven Hahn, Mrs. Anne B. Shepherd and Richard G. Poole. From the student body: Jack Kilgore and Lindsey Hicks, 12th grade; Joan Lewis and Tom O'Connor, 11th grade; Tom Reynolds and Westar Williams, 10th grade; Ball Warren and Andrew Bonner, 9th grade.

LAND IN THE NEWS: Two neighboring parcels of land in the Towoship hit the news at about the same time. The "School Site" on Snowden Lane will be the subject of a special refereadum on September 23: "Should the school board buy the 24.8 acres for a future elementary school" will be the question on the ballot. The "PCH Site" is being purchased by Princeton Community Housing, Inc. for 200 family-size apartments for middle-income families. Dotted lines show access roads to the apartment acreage.

larger program next year. The benefits acrue to our own youngsters, too."

He's had a hectic summer, orienting to a new job, hunting for a new house, moving from the Hun School campus with his wife and daughter Hilary, 6, and young Andrew, 3. He hasn't found much time for golf.

This he writes off with his predecessor's wry candor, "There's a distinct difference between enjoying golf — and being a golfer."

OPPOSES REFERENDUM

For School Site Purchase. The school board hasn't yet set the date for a public meeting on its September 23, $226,000 land-purchase referendum, but the referendum's chief opponent already has the school board's proposal in his sights.

T. B. Fisher, 342 Snowden Lane, is the husband and brother-in-law of the two owners of the largest parcel of land the school board wants to buy for a possible future school.

The property consists of 17.8 acres on Snowden belonging to the estate of Gordon Hall. The smaller parcel, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Holmes Hutson, consists of 7 acres.

The Fishers have already signed a sale agreement, even though they oppose the referendum. The Hutson's have not yet signed because they want a set-back buffer to protect their house from the future school. This is now being negotiated with the school board's lawyer.

Mr. Fisher, a member of the Township Planning Board, has used the Township's Open Space, Land Use and Community Facilities maps, to build a composite map showing Herrontown Woods, the Autumn Hill Reservation, All Saints' Chapel, the sewer field, the Girl Scouts property and the Research Zone to prove his contention that the town doesn't need a new elementary school in that area because there isn't enough land left to build houses on.

He estimates that the 24.8 Hall-Hutson acres the school board wants could produce 14 new homes.

He counts 2-300 children now bused into the eastern Township from faculty houses as further indication that the board doesn't need an elementary school in that part of town.

Mr. Fisher suggests the board might build a new high school, and transfer Middle School youngsters from Valley Road and Community Park into the present high school building. He estimates that this would mean a 50% increase in elementary school capacity.

If the board is still interested in Snowden, Mr. Fisher says the Van Dyke Wight Open Space land next to the Hall-Hutson property would be better. The land is flatter, he says, and the plot of "comparable size." Referring to the school board's comment that using Van Dyke Wight for a new school would mean bulldozing many trees, Mr. Fisher replies that the woods are "second growth."

The Open Space parcel is also closer to sewer lines, he says, adding that the Hall-Hutson land probably can't be sewered without a pump because of the land's elevation.

He cites the $226,000 purchase price, protesting that it does not include sewers, water, nor the widening of Snowden Lane to accommodate school traffic.

ON HOUSING

Sale Agreement Sigoed. The owner of the 23 acres Princeton Community Housing, Inc. wants to buy for middle-income housing has signed the agreement of sale. PCH signed last week.

William Hahn, of Morrisville, Pa., has accepted a token sum from PCH to hold the sale agreement until the state acts on PCH's application for $51,200 in seed money. That approval may be forthcoming by September 21. Cost of the land is $122,000, to be financed by the New Jersey Housing and Finance Agency.

At Township Committee Monday night, Mayor John D. Wallace and Committeman James A. Floyd emphasized that neither Committee nor the Township Planning Board has given formal approval to PCH's plans for the site. (For location of the site, see map, page 13.)

PCH has met informally with the Planning Board, as Leonard diDonato reminded Committee. "We know we have no formal accord with you, Mr diDonato said, "but we assumed from our discussion you were in accord with our site choice."

Condemnation?

If the Princeton Regional School Board's September 23 referendum on acquiring land for a possible future school is defeated, the school board must accept the public mandate: it cannot go ahead and acquire the land anyway by condemnation.

William Evans, board secretary, points out that the board can use its condemnation powers only if owners refuse to sell. In such a case, the owners are paid a fair purchase price. But the board can't condemn unless it has the money to pay for the land, and it is the referendum that authorizes the board to go out and borruw the money.

The next step for PCH hasn't been decided on, according to Mrs. Benson Carlin, of PCH. The organization hopes that the Township's new zoning ordinance will set aside the land for publicly-supported housing. If it doesn't PCH will have to apply to the Zoning Board for a variance.

Topics Of The Town

the two Princetons (see "Topics of the Town," page 26) was a unilateral one. Borough and Township officials said this week.

"The Borough was not informed, although the decision was no surprise," commented Mayor Henry S. Patterson at his Tuesday press conference.

We feel that something is much better than nothing," the mayor continued. "I think our philosophy is 'You treat us well, but how much better can we get you to treat us?'"

The mayor said that when the former Borough Board of Education sold the old Nassau Street School to the University in 1966, "they made a very advantageous deal."

Under terms of that agreement, according to William Evans, secretary of the Princeton Regional School Board, the University pays $35,000 a year for 25 years directly into the Borough's municipal coffers.

Across the Border. In the Township, meanwhile, Committeeman William L. Wilson said at Committee meeting Monday night:

"We regard this decision by the University as statesmanlike and generous. It protects us for the future."

Asked by William Cherry, 24 Dempsey Avenue, whether the Township had made any promises to the University, like seeking changes in the state law on tax-exempt property, Mr. Wilson said no.

Mr. Cherry suggested the Township consider taxing all residential property, including that owned by the University, but municipal attorney Gordon Griffin assured him that state law wouldn't allow such an ordinance.

THREE FIRMS ENTERED

On Alexander Street. Thieves entered the Grover Lumber Company, Princeton Fuel Oil and the Princeton Car Wash on lower Alexander Street early Tuesday morning and escaped with small amounts of cash.

According to Township police, two university proctors spotted three men inside the car wash and tried to apprehend them. A call for aid was sent to police at 1 a.m. but by the time Pfc. Anthony Gaylord and Pfc. Jerry Olfredo arrived, two of the suspects had escaped on foot. The third apparently fled in a car that was seen leaving the scene.

The three broke a pane of glass in each case to reach in and open a door or window, police said. Once inside, they forced open and rifled cabinets, desks and soda and candy vending machines in all three establishments.

Small amounts of money were taken from machines in the car wash and oil company, police said. Losses at the lumber company have yet to be determined.

Township police also report the unsuccessful attempt last week to force open a door of Suite P at the Medical Arts Building on Witherspoon Street. Pfc. Mario Mussa investigated.

CAR SKIDS, HITS POLE

Driver Taken to Hospital. The driver of a station wagon that skidded on rain slicked Cherry Valley Road Monday morning was taken to Princeton Hospital by a passer-by.

Mrs. Sallie A. Klum, 34, of Bayberry Road, told police that her car went into a skid when she applied her brakes while rounding a curve and she was unable to control it. Her car skidded 45 feet before colliding with a pole.

Mrs. Klum complained of pains in her left side. Pfc. David Fonk, the investigating officer, made no charges. The mishap took place at 11:20.

FIVE ARE FINED

For Stop Sign Infraction. Five Princeton area drivers were fined $12 each Monday in Borough traffic court.

Judge Theodore T. Tams Jr. levied the fines against Alfred B. Hicks, 40, 16 Moore Street; Duncan M. Anderson, 18, 30 Fackler Road; Elena B. Schofeld, 31, 421 B Butler Avenue; Lawrence P. Riddering, 38, R.D. 4, and Jacqueline F. Moslow, 34, 536 Rosedale Road. In addition, the court recommended to the state's Motor Vehicle Department that Mr.

Riddering be re-examined.

Frank C. Cilurso, 30, 86 Hill Street, and Robert Bosley, 35, 175 John Street, paid $23 and $20 for speeding. Paying fines of $12 each were Richard G. Markman, 21, 2667 Main Street, Lawrenceville, careless driving, and Alf T. Norin, 17, Stockton Lane, red light.

UPDATING PLANNED

For Recreation Master Plan. A discussion on how to update its master plan for both sides of Route 206 highlighted the meeting last week of the Princeton Joint Recreation Board.

Richard Ward of Planning Associates of Long Island, which drew up the original plan, was present to discuss informally with board members ways in which the master plan could be improved. "It's all in the talking stage right now," said recreation director R. Donald Barr. "We're talking more about site improvement now than anything else."

Among the projects originally planned on the north side of 206 were a par 3 golf course, an amphitheater, a lake and a picnic grove. A proposed ice rink on the south side of 206 — the side on which the pools are located — won't fit anymore, Mr. Barr pointed out. "That will have to go on the north side, too," he said.

Mr. Barr also reported that the return of pleasant weather had increased daily admission fees to the point "where we shouldn't have problems meeting our operating costs if it continues."

HIGH SCHOOL DELAYED

In Montgomery Township. Due to a carpenter's strike, in effect since July 1, the new Montgomery High School will not be completed in time for the opening of school on September 3.

Alternate plans, which will avoid double sessions, have been formulated by the Montgomery Township Board of Education. Classes will be held in the following locations: K-4, Burnt Hill Road School; 5th grade — Hopewell Elementary School and Blawenburg Reformed Church Educational Building; 6th grade — Harlingen School; and 7th-11th grades—Orchard Road School.

Not affected are high school seniors, who will be attending Princeton High School, the last year that Montgomery will send students to Princeton schools.

All elementary school children, K-6, will report to Burnt Hill Road School All-Purpose Room for new classroom assignments on opening day. Grades 7-11 will receive assignments in the Orchard Road School All-Purpose Room on the same date.

Shuttle buses will transport fifth and sixth grade students to their assigned buildings. Transportation routes to and from home will be announced in the newspapers at a future date.

The Montgomery Township Board of Education is hoping that the new high school building will be occupied at the earliest possible date.

SCHOOL CHANGES MADE

In West Windsor-Plainsboro. The newly organized West Windsor-Plainsboro School District will officially open for the school year, Thursday, September 4. Students in the various grades will report as follows: Plainsboro School K-6; Maurice Hawk School K-4; and Dutch Neck School 5-8. Students will go to the school they would normally attend with the exception of seventh and eighth graders, who will all attend the Dutch Neck School.

Superintendent John F. Hadden indicated that all students will be informed through the mail about bus transportation prior to the opening of school. He also requested that all students report to the gymnasium in their school for schedules and opening information on the first day of school.

An orientation will be held at Princeton High School Tuesday, September 2, 1:15-3:15, for all ninth graders and students new to the school district. Bus transportation will be provided and further information about this will also be mailed to the students. Princeton High School will open for the 1969-70 school year Wednesday, September 3.

School registration for all students new to the school district will begin Monday at the school the child will be attending. If a child is new to the district or is being registered in school for the first time, his immunization record and birth certificate are necessary to complete registration.

Faculty members new to the district will meet for orientation Tuesday, September 2 at 9:00 in the Maurice Hawk School. A general staff meeting for all faculty will be held Wednesday, September 3 at 9:00 in the Maurice Hawk School.

Arthur C. Downes has been appointed principal of the Maurice Hawk School in Princeton Junction. No principal has as yet been named for the Plainsboro School.

For additional information, residents may call the individual schools between 8:30 and 3:30 any weekday.

Mayoralty Candidates Speak on Consolidation

The Borough's two candidates for mayor — Robert Cawley, Republican, and Mrs. Alice Male, Democrat — have made statements on the decision by Borough Council not to proceed with further consolidation study. The state's estimated cost of a deeper study was $12 15,000.

Mrs. Male

I hope Borough and Township will continue to put as many departments together as possible: joint Board of Health and a joint Welfare Committee, for example. I'd like to see the centralization of the engineering departments, with a combined pool of equipment. By sharing purchasing costs, Borough and Township could each save money and keep our equipment more up to date.

I would also like to find out what legislation we'd need to bring the two police departments into closer working co-operation.

Also, we need to explore further special state legislation to solve the tax situation.

Working together on budgets, as Borough and Township officials do, gives us a "feel" for each other and reveals many areas where we can work together.

Mr. Cawley

I believe that municipal consolidation offers benefits to both communities but that the price that would be required from the Borough taxpayers at this time would be far too great to be recouped by any possible kind of savings.

In this situation, I believe that we should aggressively seek to continue to consolidate as many municipal operations into joint operations as is practical. Further, there should be continuing scrutiny of the tax situation and also for any changes in state law that might make the economics more attractive.

Before I could recommend municipal consolidation to the voters of Princeton Borough, I should have to be assured that there was reasonable equality between any increase in tax rate and the benefits to be gained, both tangible and intangible.

Secret File Illegal.

To the Editor of Town Topics:

The Mercer County American Civil Liberties Union hails the recent decision of Judge Robert A. Matthews that law enforcement officials in New Jersey must destroy secret intelligence files being kept on persons suspected of being involved in riots and other "public demonstrations."

We agree with Judge Matthews that the very knowledge of such a practice is likely to deter and intimidate persons in the legitimate exercise of their rights. The existence of such files places unacceptable restraints on those wishing to express legitimate dissent and does violence to the right of free speech as guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution.

The dangers of extension of such a system are enormous. In the words of Judge Matthews, "What is to prevent a report being rendered on one who opposes an existing political regime . . . The secret files are inherently dangerous and by their very existence tend to restrict those who would advocate . . . social and political change."

We are heartened by this decision which strikes down a practice appropriate only in a police state and helps to protect the rights of each of us.

A Different View on Housing.

To the Editor of Town Topics:

The letter writer in last week's issue who objects to construction of low and middle income housing through Princeton Community Housing oversimplifies, if not misrepresents, the reasons for the high cost of housing in Princeton. He lays the blame at the door of construction unions and (evidently) contractors. These are obviously important factors in upping costs every where.

But in Princeton the cost of housing is pushed up especially because many people with higher incomes think Princeton a desirable place to live and hence bid prices up. Thus land valuation has risen even where there is nothing constructed on the property, and a house in Princeton of identical construction with one in Trenton will cost more because it is located on a lot in Princeton. (We taxpayers in the Township, especially those with empty lots, experienced that in the last reappraisal!)

Under these conditions, construction of low and middle income housing in the "capitalistic manner" advocated by the writer is unfeasible for private developers, as is shown by the fact that the non profit institutions addressed in the letter have had to resort to providing housing for many of their personnel unable to afford the housing offered by Princeton citizens and entrepeneurs because they were bidding against people with higher incomes deriving often from extra Princeton sources (banks, e.g., or jobs in the city).

Those non profit institutions, therefore, rather than burdening the community with their housing problems have attempted to meet them on their own. Their present sponsorship of low and middle income housing has a different purpose.

Such housing, as I understand it, is not intended for persons attached to those institutions, as the letter mistakenly implies, but is an attempt to "keep Princeton Princeton," that is, to allow persons who work here, but don't earn high wages, to continue to live here in somewhat the same proportion as they have for many generations past.

One who rejects such an attempt as pious do goodism should at least consider what it means for the quality of education, protection of those highly valued properties, and general service when those who teach, police, and labor here do not have the kind of identification with the community that comes from living in it (How many Princeton commuters feel any responsibility for New York city?)

If the "capitalists" are at all interested in providing a capital solution to the problem other than the one proposed by Princeton Community Housing, why don't they get together, pool their capital, and lend it to low and middle income families so they can make those one third of purchase price down payments on those high priced properties?

Or why don't the banks get together and reduce their lending rates to about four per cent? Neither of these solutions seems any more fantastic or naive than the letter writer's suggestion that some scheme be "worked out" between contractors, unions, and investors to bring the cost of housing down.

I must confess I've never heard of a capitalist system that produced such voluntary agreements in other disregard of the market — what capitalists are going to want to bother to lose money here when they can make a profit elsewhere?

In place of sloganeering I suggest concentration on feasible ways to enable at least some persons of low and middle income to continue to live here. Princeton Community Housing, it seems to me, offers one of the few workable solutions in sight.

A Miss Who Missed Us

We have no need
At all to feel
The high bright winds
Of friend Camille.

Camille's winds died long before the last of the storm began to move northward. In her wake, cooler and clearer weather is expected to dominate these parts — for the first time in weeks. It could be downright pleasant.

Meanwhile, there's Camille's cousin, Debbie. A long range estimate of her course indicated she might visit the Carolina coast by Sunday, if so, we'll be wet, too, if not windy.

SNOW IS SHELVED

Ordinance Tabled. Snow removal by Princeton Township still isn't a fact of life. The ordinance was tabled Monday night after public hearing because its companion ordinance, providing for purchase of a $7,500 machine, hasn't yet been legally advertised. Action is scheduled for September 15.

Does the new ordinance, freeing the householder from the job of shoveling his walk, also free him from having to spread sand, gravel or salt?

The question came from Miss Helen Fairbanks, 70 Valley Road, and for a minute it had not only long Township Committee to ringing silence.

Then Committeeman James Floyd, William L. Wilson and Harry J. Wolwieder engaged in a somewhat gritty argument about sand. Mr. Floyd thinks the Township should spread it, for public safety. Mr. Wilson replied, "The Township just can't do it! We never enforced the gravel provision of that old ordinance anyway. You can't expect property owners to lay gravel." Mr. Wolwieder said, "This is a snow removal ordinance — period!"

Who is liable if somebody slips on a Township-scraped walk? Attorney Gordon Griffin said that, if the walk was poorly done, either the Township or the property owner could be liable.

William Cherry, 24 Dempsey, pointed out that the new ordinance doesn't require the Township to clear walks at all; it merely relieves the property owner of having to do so.

Fire!

Miss Fairbanks, a frequent contributor to Township Committee meetings, asked if the Township had a chance to speak up on the Borough's purchase of a $90,000 fire truck, of which the Township will presumably pay two-thirds under the rateables formula.

No, there is no chance for a Township public hearing on the engine, explained Mr. Wilson, but the Township has been investigating fire-engines with the Borough for over a year, and is "in complete accord" with the purchase.

Taxes

"We in the Township are continually paying 67%," Miss Fairbanks stated, "so that we don't get two-thirds represent ation ,and it seems to me we're being taken for a ride."

"I'm disappointed the Borough turned down a consolidation proposal," she continued. "There again, the Township had no choice. Maybe the time has come to re-think that rateables formula. And why can't the University help pay for the fire engine? It's designed to fight fire on high-rise, and who else has high-rise but the University?"

Mr. Wilson said the University paid its share in taxes.

Roads

Acceptance of a part of Stuart Road was tabled until eight or nine minor items on another section of the road can be completed.

Once again, the Township lost a too-high bid. This was $5,421 bid by Joseph Jingoli for sidewalks, curbs and widening on part of Guyot Avenue. The appropriation was $3,990. Henry J. Frank, for the Traffic Safety Committee, urged Committee to take the bid even though it was high.

This is the third time in recent months that construction bids have come in too high. Mr. Jingoli was the only bidder on this one, and Administrator Joseph R. Nini said again that contractors, up to

TO PLAY AT RIDER

"In Residence." The Princeton Chamber Orchestra has been designated "orchestra in residence" by Rider College, according to an announcement from Gordon G. Andrews, the orchestra's manager, and Stephen A. Maurer, vice-president of Rider.

Concert schedules and programs will be worked out shortly between Nicholas Harsanyi, director of the orchestra, and the Fine Arts Department at Rider.

Initial plans call for original compositions by the Rider faculty to be included in two of the concerts. The Princeton Chamber Orchestra will play four concerts on the school campus during the academic year to come.

JOINT BOARD SET

For Planning. Formal consolidation may not be near, but moving crab-wise, the two Princeton communities are approaching something like a single entity.

The ordinance creating a Regional Planning Board for Borough and Township was introduced by Township Committee Monday night. Borough Mayor Henry S. Patterson said Tuesday that the Borough will introduce its ordinance on Tuesday, September 9. Public hearing on the Township's ordinance will be Monday, September 15.

The new regional board will be formed almost immediately — on November 1. At that time ,the present Borough Planning Board will dissolve, but the present Township Planning Board will continue at least until December 31 and maybe longer, to wind up zoning ordinance amendments. That zoning business will be the sole item in the sunset years of the Township Board.

Constitution.

The board will consist of 14 members — seven each from Borough and Township, including both mayors and one representative each from Borough Council and Township Committee. The other five from the two Princetons will be citizens appointed by the mayors.

The board would have been created earlier but the two communities couldn't agree on how to finance it. Both Borough and Township Planning Boards had agree to share costs on a 50-50 basis, but Borough Council protested.

Several other formulas were proposed and Charles Cornforth for the Borough and William L. Wilson for the Township were asked to work out an agreement. Both are considered the financial experts on their respective governing bodies. In the end, the Township agreed to go along on the rateables formula.

The prime function of the new board will be to draw up a Master Plan for the "region," although the state's enabling statutes don't require any deadline for such a plan. It will also have whatever other powers Borough and Township want to give it.

It also has, built-in, the mechanism for its own de-

NEW PLANT OPENED

By Craft Cleaners. Craft Cleaners of Princeton and Princeton Junction has opened its third cleaning plant at 1810 Brunswick Avenue, corner of Trumbull Avenue, in Trenton. The new plant offers a full range of drycleaning and laundering services and is open daily from 8 to 5:30, with Thursday evening hours to 8.

Earlier this year, Craft Cleaners was among a handful of cleaning plants selected from more than 40,000 throughout the nation to receive an award for excellence from the National Institute of Dry Cleaning.

In addition to the new Trenton plant, Craft Cleaners maintains two other plants at 225 Nassau Street in Princeton and on Cranbury Road in Princeton Junction.

SIX MONTH EARNINGS UP

At Applied Data Research. Applied Data Research has reported a net income of $200,752 or 22 cents a share for the six month period ending June 30, as opposed to $145,153 or 16 cents a share for the comparable period last year.

The computer software firm, located on Route 206, Montgomery Township, had revenues of $2,775,193 for the current period compared with $1,668,716 a year ago.

CERTIFICATION GRANTED

To Diellhenn Music School. The Department of Education of the State of New Jersey has certified that the Diellhenn Music School has "complied with the New Jersey standards for approval of private schools," according to official notification received from Dr. Carl J. Marburger, Commissioner.

The certificate of approval is one of the first to be issued to music schools in the State under the new legislation providing for their qualification.

The School, which is located in the 20 Nassau Street Building, with a studio at 50 Allison Road, was founded in 1932 by its present director, John C. Diellhenn, while he was still an undergraduate at Princeton. It is the oldest of the Princeton music schools.

The Diellhenn Music School offers a complete classical piano curriculum for pupils from age six and an optional course in popular piano for older pupils and adults. All piano study is coordinated with theory, harmony, and general musicianship. Harmony courses are also open to students of the guitar and other instruments. Also offered are courses in pedagogy.

AL/COM OPENS OFFICE

Near San Francisco. Applied Logic Corporation, Princeton based computer time-sharing utility, has opened a western regional office near San Francisco, California. It will offer technical and marketing support to the company's associates and customers located west of the Mississippi.

Joseph Keenan, western regional manager, is in charge, assisted by George Bartelme, associate relations manager, and Kent Ripley, regional technical representative.

Besides supporting present associates, the office personnel will seek to establish other associate offices in the region. The company anticipates offering local communications coverage over its AL/COM Computer Time-Sharing System in 15 western cities by 1970.

struction: it can be eliminated, either partly or entirely.

The two municipal zoning boards will remain, and each municipality will continue to have its own zoning ordinances.

Mr. Wilson said after the ordinance was introduced, "This is the most important thing we've done since school merger!"

Asked by Mrs. Benson Carlin in the audience whether there was any rationale for a single Master Plan and two zoning ordinances, Mayor Wallace exclaimed, "Is there any rationale for two municipalities?"

VOTING GROUPS MERGE

Seek Lower Voting Age. The Voting Age Coalition, Inc. and the New Jersey-Let Us Vote have merged. The chairmen of both groups, David R. DuPell of VAC and Roger B. Jacobs of LUV, have unified their groups' efforts which seek a yes vote on the November referendum which would allow 18, 19 and 20-year olds to vote.

All of the efforts in support of the 18-year-old voting age are now merged under the Voting Age Coalition, Inc. Mr. DuPell was elected president and Mr. Jacobs will act as executive director.

The Democratic and Republican gubernatorial candidates, former Governor Robert B. Meyner and Congressman William T. Cahill, have endorsed the VAC efforts. Nelson Gross, Republican State Committee Chairman and Salvatore Bontempo, Democratic State Committee Chairman, are both members of the board of trustees.

In a fund raising project, Vac is selling tickets for the opening night performance of Johnny Mathis and Henry Mancini on August 25 at 8:30 p.m. at the Garden State Arts Center. The center is located off Exit 116 of the Garden State Parkway. Anyone interested in purchasing tickets for this performance should write VAC State Headquarters, 33 West State Street, Trenton, 08608, or call 396-1818.

Learn at Your Own Speed, Not Somebody Else's

"I like to think we have very strong fences but freedom inside. These kids know they're supposed to master certain skills and get to know themselves better so they can go deeper into every subject when they get to Middle School. . ."

That's a general philosophical description of the Multi-age, or Multi-level classes at John Witherspoon School from a teacher who has spent this first year with the new program.

At John Witherspoon School, 75 youngsters who would have been in traditional third, fourth and fifth grades have been lumped together and then divided, more or less at random, into three 25-pupil multi-age classes. Each class, is, therefore, a mix of ages, abilities and races.

Teachers are Mrs. Doris Smithey, Miss Andrea Martin and Theodore Hammond. All volunteered to teach in the new program.

What Is It? Partly because professional jargon can be confusing to laymen, partly because a program like this varies from town to town, there has been a great deal of misunderstanding in Princeton about Multi-age at John Witherspoon.

Some parents, for example, hear it called "non-graded" and assume that the children merely slide through on a sloppy pass-fail basis. But "grade" in this context means "third," "fourth," "fifth," not "A", "B" or "C". Multi-age children get report cards, too.

And parents, hearing that children progress at their own levels, say there is no incentive unless kids compete with other kids.

To some adults, the program sounds too flexible and they wonder if children "really" learn."

Parents Speak Up. Parents whose children are in Multi-age (and some parents asked to have their children assigned there), see the program in quite a different light. Teachers keep in constant touch with parents, and mothers and fathers with children in Multi-age classes know quite clearly what is being done. They say:

"My child has just blossomed this year!"

"My son was in a dead end until he got into that class and got over the idea of failure."

"The great advantage is that the class can be structured or unstructured, depending on what the child needs at the moment and this is precisely the key to my son's success this term."

(Me, too!) One child — and she wants to be identified: it's Sarah Jane Nelson — volunteered to write a paper describing Multi-age.

"Multi-age is a class where children work at their own speed. Children switch classes about three times a day. Unlike most classes, Multi-age has different grades in one class. The Multi-age teachers often make working fun.

"I like Multi-age because children that are older help younger children. Another good thing is that you don't have to sit in one seat all day and learning is more fun. In my class, my teacher lets our guinea pig run loose around the room. My teacher also lets us work out in the hall sometimes, but at the same time, he is strict about us being quiet."

And John Witherspoon's principal, Dr. Wesley Johnson, and the staff are so satisfied with Multi-age results in this first year that they plan to add three classes this fall.

Drive Yourself. As Sarah Jane says, the core of Multi-age is that kids work at their own speed. This means that a fast-learning child who needs almost no help is allowed to work on his own, freeing the teacher to give intensified, individual help to the child who needs it.

"You have time, in this class to ask yourself 'What does this child need most?'" explains one teacher. "You know that boy over there is going so fast in math that he only needs to touch bases with you. He may be 150 pages ahead of another child. So you concentrate on helping some other child to grasp the concepts he's missing."

"The child who doesn't learn rapidly may be given a book based on old-fashioned rote learning," another teacher explains, "maybe a work book, too, because she may need more structure than another child.

"The children select their own reading books, then discuss them with me and fill out a brief report on a card, which becomes a record of what they've done. I don't require long book-reports; it sours the book!"

One teacher remarked, by the way, that some children who plod along, reading at an average level in school, go home and plunge eagerly into advanced material, like "Scientific American," because it happens to be something they're interested in.

"Just Kids, Working." A visitor to a Multi-age classroom finds it busy. "You won't see much," warns a teacher, "just kids working."

It is so quiet in the room that teacher and visitor have to speak in whispers. The kids have just come back from the library and are busy at projects.

"Multi age" is startlingly evident—an outsider quickly sees the difference between the youngest, who would be in third grade and the oldest, ready for Middle School's sixth grade next fall. And yet one of those little fellows may be reading easily at the level of the boy poised for sixth grade.

Half a dozen younger girls have decided to push their desks together, and they are reading in a kind of cluster. Two boys, one reading and one writing, have pushed their desks together, too.

Alone, a boy is reading, his attention focused so intently on the book that the room doesn't exist. It's a "Peanuts" cartoon book.

You Can Help

Parent aides would be welcomed next fall by teachers in the three Multi-age classes at John Witherspoon School. To parents who hold back believing they aren't qualified one teacher says,

"Any parent could sit and listen to a child read aloud. Sometimes, a child desperately needs a quiet, one-to-one relationship with an adult for only half an hour. Sometimes a child simply needs to be 'opened up' and an adult could listen, take a cue from the child himself — perhaps he's talking about a bird he's seen — and motivate him to find out all kinds of things about birds."

Correcting math papers is another possibility. The child puts date and page number on his paper and if he's made a mistake, the teacher or aide merely writes "go back and look it up — you haven't read thoroughly enough.

"We 'do' papers," says one teacher, "we don't 'grade' them."

has come from Dr. Johnson's office about a swarm of bees in a school tree. Nice instant-science, but — watch out!

"Define 'swarm' " the teacher asks, pointing to a boy.

Caught off guard, he stammers clumsily about bees kind of flying . . . A girl's hand shoots up.

"I believe he was thinking of the verb . . . but you really meant the noon, didn't you? 'Swarm' as a noon, means . . ."

This girl, later in the morning, bounces eagerly to her desk with a volume of the encyclopedia. "On the track of something? Getting warm?" the teacher asks.

"Yep!"

Meanwhile, one boy has decided to investigate bees and he reads aloud, excitedly, from a reference book. He comes to th teacher's desk and this captures the attention of the boy reading "Peanuts." He lays the book aside and peers at pictures and text about bees.

Then he says to the teacher, "I finished 'Peanuts.' Anything else I can read?" The teacher gives him a notebook and says, "Johnny wrote this story and I think he'd be happy to have you read it." The boy goes back to his intease, concentrated reading, this time on a friend's original story.

Help Me? Sure! Helping each other is understood, in Multiage. When a little boy can't find a big word in the student dictionary, the teacher sends him to "the adult dictionary" and says, "Ask Alice to help you." He goes to Alice's desk, interrupts her writing and speaks to her softly. Together they go up to the big dictionary.

"A little child yearns to be able to do what the big kids do," says the teacher. "This boy looks forward to being able to help, too, some day."

The mother who liked the mix of structure and non structure wrote to one teacher, "My son likes teaching other children. I believe this has given him a lot of self assurance and is one of the great strengths of Multi-age. .

"He seems to have stopped measuring himself against other's achievements. There was always a great deal of anxiety connected with 'demotion' to a lower group and constant overemphasis on descriptions of children 'at the bottom.' I asked my son about this tonight. All he could tell me is that everyone is doing well. This would seem to be the best testimonial to the success of Multi-age."

SEMINAR FOR FRESHMEN Open to All Students. A special study skills seminar for college freshmen will be offered at Mercer County Community College (MCCC) next week, Monday through Friday. Students need not be enrolled at MCCC to attend.

Students working in small seminar groups will cover such topics as note taking, gaining the most from lectures, preparing for a test, getting the most out of a text and preparing a term paper.

"The few hours devoted to acquiring these skills may be the difference between a successful and a not so successful college career. The student needs these study tools," said John J. Connolly, Director of Community and Extension Services at MCC, in announcing the program.

Classes will meet from 9 to 11:30 a.m. in Room C125, 101 South Broad Street, Trenton.

Registration will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. this Thursday in the Registrar's office, 109 West State Street, Trenton. Tuition is $9 for county residents, $15 for other New Jersey residents, and $21 for out of state residents. All MCCC incoming freshmen pay $9.

Additional information is available from Mr. Connolly at 396-9241.

They'll Open Any Book— But A School Book

He's reading on a high school level and he's only in 7th grade. His report card? All C's.

She's asked for a pamphlet on how to work a computer. Her school marks? About the same as his. She's in 8th grade.

These are the bafflers. Intelligent youngsters, apparently capable of outstanding work in school. The teachers regard them with certain bewilderment and call them "under achievers."

"We hope we're going to learn some of them on," John Salladino says of the 54 bafflers enrolled this summer in the unorthodox back-to-school project at Princeton Day School.

"The thing about the under achiever is that so little he is written about them!" adds Mrs. Louise Lockette, guidance counselor at Trenton's Junior High School No. 3, which supplied the project with youngsters. "There's a lack of real knowledge. We are trying to figure out why the child rejects the school program. There are all sorts of variables . . ."

Do the reasons lie within the child himself, or his home environment, or in the teaching system, or in a combination of all three? Mrs. Lockette began five years ago to try to find out. "There is so little written!" she repeats with a kind of exasperation.

John Salladino of the Princeton Day School mathematics faculty, who was a Youth Associates leader during his undergraduate days at Princeton, headed the bafflers' project, formally called the "PDS Summer Enrichment Program."

UPI-inspired. The project was proposed by Trenton's United Progress, Inc. Costs were shared by the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs and PDS.

"The state is particularly interested in the results of the computer training," Mr. Salladino notes. "They want to know if it is feasible as part of a high school or junior high school program. The kids are actually solving problems now. Hopefully, we'll find computer time for them this fall, so that they can continue this as a club or in o school session.

"The main emphasis of the whole program is that it carries on in the fall."

Five teachers and a score of young, volunteer counselors were enlisted to help in the experiment. Tom Perers, who will be teaching at PDS this coming school year, was the computer programming instructor. Jay Ross and Bill Power, who took the computer course at PDS last year, were counselors.

Bob Whitlock, also of the PDS faculty, taught industrial arts. The youngsters spent a week on rocketry and just before the Apollo 11 flight, blasted off their own rockets in the PDS fields. They explored sound in another study unit, making musical instruments and signal devices.

Mrs. Rebecca Mackey of John Witherspoon School held theatre workshop, putting to use the theatre games she had learned last year at the McCarter in a class taught by Betty Liveright. "You have to give them a situation that involves their own social life, then things really flow — because it is close to them," she said in the school theatre one morning. Pooh Holt, Louise Sayen and Cynthia Walsh were the counsellors on hand that day.

Mrs. Bonnie Randall, an art teacher at Junior 3, taught arts and crafts, assisted by Hilary Brown a mong others. "Art is a real form of freedom," Mr. Salladino said as part of the class slapped wet plaster onto a form and others dug away at linoleum blocks. "And it also enhances communication."

There was a daily program of sports and recreation, guided by Lou Myers of PDS and Debby Renson, a student at Montgomery. The events ranged from volleyball to excursions to Island Beach. Gil Farr was all-round program aid, in charge of counsellors, teaching journalism and photography.

Unharried, Unhurried. The school halls were airy and cool, and the youngsters had a way of lingering until the last minute in one class and then flying off to the next. There was an air of easy friendship between the boys and the girls and their teachers.

Quick laughter bubbled up no matter where you went, in the delight of discovery and freedom from schoolroom fears. "The computer wrote a poem!" a girl laughs.

"It's a guitar!" another smiles, half hiding her nearly-completed stringed box. Another bends over a linoleum block on which she's sketched a freeform tree. "I don't know what I'm going to do with it. There's a lot of things . . ."

Two boys bend over a work bench, a diagram of a door bell in front of them, and half-completed bells in their hands. One presses a button and his bell gives off a doll buzz. "No ring yet!" They laugh.

Three boys hunch intently over intricate plans for model aircraft — Havilands and Fokkers. They pin pieces of balsa to the outline of the wing as intently as engineering modelmakers at RCA.

The white volleyball pounds back and forth over the net on the sunny court at the rear of the school. The high, excited voices of the girls blend into the summer scene of tall trees and birds and the low hum of the tractor in a nearby field.

In the theatre, a little boy in shorts settles into a chair on the stage, his legs held bent in the air. He is a doctor with his feet on the desk A patient comes in with a tale of pain. "Go back out," he orders her. "You forgot to knock."

Mrs. Lockette of Junior 3 will he in charge of the following up next fall. A lively, attractive woman, she says, "We don't know yet what the outcome of the summer program will be. The children are very much interested. It's a vastly different kind of thing from what they have observed at public school." The comments of the teachers and the youngsters' own evaluations are in the process of consideration now.

The 54 buffters, who were picked up at Junior 3 every morning at 9 by a bus company called "Tilde One" and returned daily at 3:15 from July 7 to August 15, were rarely absent. "They felt they were something special to be selected to come here," Mr. Saladino said.

He pointed into a cubby hole housing a computer teletype. "That's Tanya, working alone with a teacher. She is more advanced than the others. The second day here, she asked to see a manual. Eventually, she is going to be teaching the others."

"When you see the ambitions these youngsters have, it gives you the greatest feeling!"

The youngsters are the black high school graduates who have won scholarship awards from the Elizabeth Taylor Byrd Fund.

The speaker is Mrs. David Taylor, who talks with quietly glowing pride about her late sister-in-law, the Fund established in Mrs. Byrd's name and the ambitious young students who might not have been able to go on from Princeton High School without the help of Elizabeth Taylor Byrd Scholarship money.

This fall, four students will enter college with Elizebath Taylor Byrd Fund scholarships two with $500, one with $300 and one with $400.

"We want to make sure we can give at least $500 awards," Mrs. Taylor explains. "The Fund has a black friend who has anonymously given enough each year for the past four or five years, to enable us to give a third $500 award."

In addition, the Fund makes an interest free $500 loan to a student already attending college Money is also made available to the YWCA so that promising girls can attend Y leadership conferences.

The money comes each year through a single fund-raising event the annual Elizabeth Taylor Byrd dinner-dance held each February at the Nassau Inn. Prominent speakers are featured, such as Sir Arthur Lewis, Constance Baker Motley, Daisy Bates, and the community participation is wide.

Also, the Fund receives contributions from other organizations and from individuals In its turn, the Fund gives to the community, like the donations made to the Princeton Study Center, the United Church Women of Princeton and the Pearl Bates Camp Fund.

A "Caring" Person. The fund was established eight years ago. "You see, my sister-in-law had been deeply involved with people all her life, especially with young people through the YWCA," Mrs. Taylor begins. "She died very suddenly in November, 1961, and all of us who knew her felt that some way should be found to keep alive the ideals she had always worked for. She was most exceptional in caring, truly caring, for other people."

She was also dedicated to the idea of helping young people in return for the help she had received as a young girl from the former "Y" on Green Street

"At first, we thought of giving money each year to the Y to send young girls to teen conferences," Mrs. Taylor continues, "but so few black kids went to the Y that we decided we'd perform a greater service if we went out into the community."

"I remember it was a Sunday," she smiles, "and we just knocked on doors, reminding people about Elizabeth and explaining what we wanted to do. Well, the response was wonderful!"

A Job Well Done. "You know, Mrs. Byrd's devotion wasn't limited to black people. She never really thought about a young person's color," Mrs. Taylor explains. "But we've limited our scholarship program to Negro students because we feel they have special needs in this particular time and place. And we'd rather do a small job well, than to spread out too much."

Since 1961, the Fund has awarded 39 scholarships. Boys and girls have gone to North Carolina Agriculture and Technical College, to Duquesne, Kentucky State College, Ohio University, Barrington in Rhode Island, Kansas City Institute of Art and Design, the University of Houston.

"About 20 of those 30 have stayed the whole four years," Mrs. Taylor says.

Apply! It all begins early in the winter, when Fund officers meet with Princeton High School seniors and tell them about the scholarships.

"The school is very helpful, and goodance people encourage kids to pick up applications.

This year, 12 students applied and eight were interviewed. "We only intedview those who have already been admitted to an institution, because our check goes directly to the college, but I think we're going to have to change our tuning." Mrs. Taylor says, looking over her calendar.

"We find that a student may not apply for admission to college at all because he doesn't think he can afford it. But he CAN afford it, because we could give him the money!"

Campus Visits. Later in the year, the Fund takes students on bus trips to various college campuses. They've visited Morgan State in Baltimore, Howard University and Lincoln University.

"This year, we branched out a little bit and gave some money to help Middle School French students go to France with their class," Mrs. Taylor smilingly reads a thank-you note in careful pre-teen handwriting: "I hope some day to make my friends, teachers, family and you very proud of me. Without your kind consideration and help, it wouldn't have been possible for me to make the trip.'"

"And you know," Mrs. Taylor concludes, folding the note away. "It's that ambition—that desire to make you proud of me'—that gives such a wonderful feeling."

"We had one student," she says, "who told us he wanted to go to college so he could help his father. 'If I can help him,' the boy said, 'he won't have to moonlight at two jobs.' And then his eyes lifted even higher. 'I've just GOT to make something of my life!'"

ORIENTATION DATES SET

For Hopewell Valley Staff. Newly-appointed staff members of the Hopewell Valley Regional School District will participate in a two-day orientation program scheduled for August 28 and 29. Greetings to the new staff and an introductory message on behalf of the School Board will be delivered by the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. William J. Nunan.

The district's administrative staff will take part in the morning briefings. Principal Richard Willever will explain the organization of the Central High School.

The Timberlane Junior School will be discussed by its Vice Principal, Mrs. Vivian S. Laird, while Joseph Lebediker will review the elementary schools in Hopewell Valley. A presentation on the audio-visual aids available in the district will be made by William R. Booz, Jr. An outline on the special services available to faculty personnel will be given by Miss Edna Royer.

A picnic luncheon at the Harbourton School is planned for the orientation participants, which include 20 student instructors who will practice-teach in the system this year. A motor tour of the area will conclude the first day's activities. Ernest Johnson, Coordinator of Transportation, will conduct the motor tour.

New instructors will meet in the school in which they will teach on the second day of the program. Individual school orientation seminars will be held by each school principal at that time.

"We conduct this annual orientation program for new teachers to acquaint them with our schools and community" commented Dr. Nunan. "Throughout the school year, members of our Faculty Advisory Committee arrange workshops on recent educational innovations to enable the entire staff to keep abreast of current advancements."

Students will return to school on Wednesday, September 3, in Hopewell Valley.

MCCC OPENS SEPT. 15

Part-Time Courses Open. An expanded freshman class, an enlarged faculty and several new programs will all be part of the picture on Mnnday, September 15, Mercer County Community College's first day of classes.

Nearly 1100 students have been admitted to the freshman class, bringing the college enrollment to 1900, an increase of 150 over last year. About 70 per cent of the freshmen are expected to be Mercer County residents.

All Mercer County residents are eligible to attend MCCC full-time if they are 18 years old and possess a high school diploma. Registration for full-time students is Monday and Tuesday, September 8 and 9 in the College Library, 101 South Broad Street, Trenton.

Students need not be enrolled in a degree program to take advantage of the 145 courses which will be offered this fall for part-time study. The courses which cover such areas as data processing, humanities, science, business, mathematics, engineering and engineering technology, are expected to attract about 1900 part time students.

Courses offered for the first time in the evening and extension program include Afro Art, The Cinema: A Study of the Film, Career Exploration, and a special course to prepare insurance underwriters to take the New Jersey State exam for certified professional casualty underwriters.

OTHER PAPERS will run your classifieds for half price, or for nothing if they do not sell. In TOWN TOPICS, you'll find more ads and better results.

University to Offset Tax Losses to Community

Princeton University announced this week that it will make an annual contribution — declining in sum over a 10 year period — to the community and its schools when any property obtained by the University in the future is granted tax exempt status.

The new policy was announced today by Princeton Financial Vice President and Treasurer, Ricardo A. Mestres. Text of the announcement follows:

"As the largest single taxpayer in the Borough and the Township," Mr. Mestres said, "the University is acutely sensitive to any sudden shifts in the community's tax situation. We are introducing this new policy in an effort to minimize the impact on the local tax structure of a property being granted tax exempt status and not to create any hardships for either municipality."

Sliding Scale Planned. The amount to be contributed by the University will be determined with reference to the actual taxes paid on a property for municipal and school purposes at the time the tax-exempt status is granted. The contribution would decline by 10% per annum over the following decade.

While the University has chosen not to seek tax exemption for the former Edgar Palmer property, the new policy would apply in the case of the acquisition of the Princeton Inn, a major component in the University's implementation of coeducation. Real estate taxes on the Inn now amount to some $70,000 annually in payments to the Borough and Township.

With the closing of the Inn in June 1970, Princeton will begin converting the Inn, in which the University is the major stockholder, into a "college" type residence, dining and social facility and will open it to 375 undergraduate men and women students in the fall of 1970.

The last two decades have seen the amount that the supposedly "tax exempt" University pays in Borough and Township taxes soar from just under $120,000 annually to almost three quarters of a million dollars a year. In 1950-51, the University paid $88,394.21 in taxes to the Borough. In 1968-69, the figure had grown to $270,768.15.

In the Township, the increase has been even more dramatic — a jump from $31,325.94 in 1950-51 to $464,561.23 this year. The University's tax bill is equivalent to 9.5 per cent of the overall Township assessment.

Inn Loss Offset. Township taxes paid by the University will be increased since the opening in July of the Hartley Avenue Apartments for faculty and staff. The additional tax will amount to nearly $60,000, or some $22,000 more than the Township now receives from the Princeton Inn.

Since the end of World War II, University-owned property in the Borough shows a net gain of 4.3 acres — this figure being the difference between 36.2 acres acquired and 31.9 acres sold.

Nearly 31 of the 36 plus acres it has acquired in the Borough since 1946 remain on the tax rolls. The bulk of properties obtained are being used as faculty and staff housing, on which the University pays full taxes.

The exceptions are two former privately-owned eating clubs on Prospect Avenue which have been converted into University social and dining facilities for students, a house on University Place now used as a dormitory for graduate students, the former railroad freight station now serving as a University warehouse, and a sliver of land on Olden Avenue (640 square feet) occupied by the Engineering Quadrangle.

School a Source of Revenue. On the other hand, added revenue to the Borough has been produced by the University's acquisition of what were previously non-taxed properties. Most notable is the former Nassau Street School which, as a public school, had never been on the tax rolls.

When the school, now known as 185 Nassau Street and headquarters of the Creative Arts Program, was purchased from the Borough in 1965 for a total of $1,425,000, the University, the only bidder for the property, paid $350,000 in cash and agreed to pay $45,000 annually for a period of a quarter century, stopping in 1967.

Two homes on Alexander Street, which for many years had been tax exempt because of Seminary ownership and church affiliation, are now serving as faculty houses and have been taxed producing ratables since their purchase by the University. Altogether, in the Borough and Township, the University pays taxes on 1,030 residential units maintained for faculty and staff and married graduate students.

In the Township since 1946 Princeton has acquired approximately 35 acres, including the former Pennsylvania Railroad yards south of the Princeton railroad station, the Post Office Annex, and the tax-exempt Princeton Country Day School which was built on University property in 1930.

In contrast, during this same period, most of the land sold by the University in the Township — nearly 110 acres — has been used for private building lots on which tax-yielding homes have been built. In addition, there are 75 one-half acre lots sold under the University "Land Loan Plan" to members of the faculty and staff for the construction of completely taxable private homes on which the taxes are paid by the owner.

Young Readers Give Advice to Library

"Know any kids who'd like to discuss books?"

The question went out earlier this summer to Mrs. Sara Harris, retired Princeton Regional Schools teacher, from Mrs. Roland Bennett of the children's department, Princeton Public Library.

Mrs. Harris said yes indeed, she knew five real readers just out of 6th grade and ready for Middle School this fall and 7th grade.

So far, the five have met four times with Mrs. Bennet and Mrs. Donald Medley, children's librarian, to talk about books and to share reading experiences. Mrs. Medley needing some help, brought out preview copies of several new books and asked her young advisers to read and give recommendations: should the books be classified "adult" or "juvenile?" What kind of person would like the book? If it were non-fiction, what subject category would be the place to file it?

The group is scheduled to meet once more, and Robert Staples, public librarian, thinks the project may go on this fall. The five seventh-graders in the group discussions are Ellen Breckenridge, Rocco Carnevale, Melissa Sly, Stacy Kopliner and Anita Fishbein.

Summer readers steeped themselves in the weird and super-natural this year,, Mrs. Medley reports. At all ages, there was a trend down this dark and mysterious path. Lots of magic books, too. Favorites? "Moon Eyes," "Jane-Emily" and "Earthfast."

In peculiar contrast, kids also read heavily in almost factual fiction, the kind devoted to contemporary problems: stories of slum life, books about youngsters in crisis with parents, and so on.

Two new magazines are now in the children's department — Mad Magazine, which is grabbed, snapped, seized the minute a new issue comes out, and Auto Racing.

Know what else kids read this summer? Books about horses and dogs. So what else is new, Mrs. Medley?

The annual pre-holiday Christmas Concert will be presented on December 4. All activities are open to the public and ticket information can be obtained by contacting the Student Activities Office at Rider.

VAN CLIBURN RETURNS

To Waterloo Village Festival. In an unusual booking in the concert world, pianist Van Cliburn will return to Waterloo Village Music Festival in an all Chopin solo recital on Saturday evening, August 30 at 8:30. This will be the final concert of the Waterloo season this summer.

Mr. Cliburn appeared at Waterloo on July 19 to an audience of more than 7,500 people. Many hundreds were turned away at that concert, which is one of the primary reasons he has been asked to visit the festival a second time this summer.

Seats for the Van Cliburn concert are now available by telephone (201) 347-5545-49, by mail, Waterloo Village Music Festival, and at the box office. Prices are $6.50, 5.50, and 4.50 for reserved seating in the tent, and $2.50 for lawn seating.

PRINCE

Last Summer (now playing) is a picture about teenagers which that group cannot see: it has an "X" rating from the MPAA — due ostensibly to profanity, nudity and a brutal rape scene. But it is a subtly symbolical drama that says much about the human condition for those who are willing to ponder it.

The team of Eleanor and Frank Perry have developed and refined a very special technique in making films. They take a simple plot and construct it in a series of vignettes that reveal character and relationships. "Last Summer" is an artistic success — on the level with their film of last year, "The Swimmer."

The film recounts in episodic form the experiences of four teenagers, all of wealthy families, left to fend for themselves by the parents who have brought them to Fire Island for a vacation. The two boys are pals; they strike up an acquaintance with an uninhibited girl whom they meet on the beach and assist her in rescuing a sea gull with a fish hook in its throat.

The threesome is joined by another girl who is slightly prudish and reserved. She comes to act as a "conscience" for the others. The more significant episodes involve a "truth game" — a very funny scene and written with an uncanny ear for teen talk — an encounter with a Puerto Rican youth, and finally the savage rape of the shy girl.

PLAYHOUSE

The Shoes of the Fisherman (now playing). It is some time in the not-too distant future when the Archbishop is suddenly released from a Siberian prison camp by the Soviet Premier. He is sent to Rome where the Pope makes him a Cardinal. On the Pope's death, he is elected successor by the College of Cardinals.

A simple man, his thinking and behavior are direct and unconventional. The Soviet Premier confronts him with a monumental problem, the possibility that China's starving millions may at any moment trigger a cataclysmic war. His solution lies in his concern with human integrity, dignity and love.

Anthony Quinn is the Archbishop, a role he assumes rather stiffly. Sir Laurence Olivier is cast as the Premier, and Oskar Werner appears as a liberal young priest whose friendship with the lonely pope is marred by the conservatives among the older theologians.

The drama is heightened by the magnificent pageantry surrounding the papacy, the ceremony of the papal election and the grandeur of the Vatican.

Area Resident Cited for Heroism in Vietnam

During recent ceremonies at LZ Betty, Phan Thiet, South Vietnam, Sergeant Christopher Rolland of Cranbury was decorated with the Bronze Star with "V" Device for Heroism. It was his third award of the Bronze Star.

The citation reads as follows: "Sergeant Rolland distinguished himself while serving as a team leader in Company E, 3d Battalion, 506th Infantry, on a movement to contact mission north of the city of Phao Thiet, Binh Thuan Province, Republic of Vietnam.

When his platoon and a tank platoon were moving to reinforce a beleaguered infantry company heavily engaged with a North Vietnamese Army battalion, they were hit by heavy rocket propelled grenade and small arms fire while entering a banana grove.

With his men somewhat disorganized, Sergeant Rolland quickly organized them into an effective fighting force and began to assault the enemy positions. Seeing an enemy soldier preparing to fire a hand rocket launcher at one of the tanks, he charged the enemy bunkers under direct enemy fire and began to provide a heavy base of fire, forcing the enemy to redirect fire against him.

This allowed the tank commander to withdraw to an effective range where he could utilize the tank's main gun on the enemy implacement. When the bunker had been destroyed, a sweep of the area revealed six enemy casualties and numerous weapons.

"Sergeant Rolland's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.

"By direction of the President of the United States under the provisions of Executive Order 11046."

A BRAVE SOLDIER IS CONGRATULATED: Sgt. Christopher Rolland (left), of Cranbury is congratulated by Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais, 101st Airborne Division, after receiving the Bronze Star for heroism in South Vietnam.

Sergeant Rolland has been in Vietnam since July 1968. During his tour he has previously received the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Bronze Star for Heroism, the Bronze Star for Meritorious Service, the Air Medal for an insertion by helicopter under enemy fire, and the Army Commendation Medal for Meritorious Achievement.

A 1967 graduate of Hightstown High School, he is the son of Mrs. Justine Rollaod of Cranbury and Kermit Rolland of Princeton. He is scheduled to return to this country in January, 1970.

WHAT CAUSES A WIFE TO NAG? Is it out of dislike or love? "There's got to be some dislike there," says Bon Liquori (left), who reports he is the nag in his family. "To get something done or to keep her husband from having a good time," says Robert Tovar, who adds that his wife doesn't nag him at all.

Question Of The Week

Question: In your opinion, does a nagging wife act that way out of love or dislike?

Where asked: Princeton Shopping Center

Ronald Liquori, Mercerville, barber, Center Barber Shop: Out of dislike. There just has to be some dislike there, insofar as I see a nagging person. I might add, I'm the nag in our family.

Ronald Tovar, Trenton, barber, Center Barber Shop: My wife doesn't nag me, so I wouldn't know. I'm lucky, I guess. I would say that wives nag to get something done or to keep their husbands from having a good time.

Mrs. Renee Duval, Hopewell, housewife: I say it depends solely on what she is nagging about. If she nags him to drive carefully in traffic, that's out of love for his well being. On the other hand, if she nags him to bring home more money, when there is adequate financing, that's out of dislike for something — not necessarily him. Something might be bothering her and this is her way of expressing herself.

Mrs. Barbara White, 118 Cedar Lane, housewife: Out of dislike. I just don't think if she loved her husband she would nag him. I think she'd take a more kindly outlook of what is bothering her and approach him in a different way, in a more tactful way.

R. D. Stanford, Route 1, chauffeur - gardener: I don't think it is either one. I think it's a mental condition if a woman nags all the time. She is bothered about something and she is taking it out on someone else.

Mrs. Michael Hendrick, 415-A Devereux, housewife: It's probably exhaustion rather than love or dislike—that's the usual situation. It could be dislike, although I doubt if that is the real reason. If a woman is very tired, dislike can surface easily and she'll nag. A lot of people nag when they are tired; it's not to be taken seriously.

Thomas Saltzgueber, Philadelphia, assistant foreman for construction firm of Irwin and Leighton: I'm a good one to ask: I'm just getting divorced. I sort of think anyone who nags her husband does so not so much out of dislike as out of a desire to want to try to change him. She married the guy, she loved him and knew what he was like. . .then all of a sudden he's not good enough, she wants to try to change him.

Mrs. Cecile Boccuto, Hightstown, teacher: Out of love. I think she thinks things have to be done certain ways. She wants her husband to appear to herself and to others in the best way. In other words, she doesn't want him to make a fool of himself.

Mrs. William McFadden, 69 Moran Avenue, housewife: Out of love. If you love a man you tell him his good points as well as his bad. If you love him, you won't constantly nag him but if he needs it, you will. After all, it's not all peaches and cream. I think if you make a mistake you would want your wife to tell you. I know if I had done something wrong, I would want to hear it from my husband rather than from some one else.

Eugene Panza, Wihington, assistant manager, Acme Store 93 Shopping Center: I wouldn't know. I don't have a nagging wife. And I wouldn even want to guess why other wives do. I might be wrong.

Ray Snedeker, Kingston resident: I don't have a wife but I would say probably they do it out of love. They're very concerned for you.

Sophomore Crop Brings Good Potential to Princeton Football

FOOTBALL OUTLOOK—II

(This is the second of a series of four articles on Princeton's football prospects for 1969).

Sophomore Potential High. Football coaches have mixed feelings about sophomores: they want the newcomers to the varsity to be good, while at the same time they hope there will be no need to rely on them heavily. As a matter of preference, they like to bring them along slowly and not inject them into the pressure-cooker of a starting position in their first year on the varsity.

In the opener against Rutgers a year ago, Princeton started 21 juniors and seniors and a lone sophomore—John Hess as cornerback. By the time the season was ready to end against Cornell on November 23, just two other sophomores had worked their way onto the starting lineup—both also on defense. They were linebackers Chris Waugh and Dennis Burns.

Even Brian McCullough, who finished the season as the third sophomore in Princeton history (with Dick Kazmaier and Royce Flippin) to top 1,000 yards in total offense was not the starting tailback. Accordingly, players who have answered the opening whistle for all 27 games of their Princeton careers can be counted on the fingers of one hand for an entire decade.

A major determining factor in the degree that a sophomore sees action is, of course, the availability of experienced manpower ahead of him. Of the top sophomore prospects this fall, possibly as many as four have a better shot at a starting position than their classmates because graduation swept out the best of the 1968 crop from the Princeton roster.

VERSATILE SOPHOMORE: Rod Plummer, captain of last fall's freshman team, is one of the varsity newcomers who seems sure to fit into the Princeton picture in his first year. A two-way player, he is currently scheduled for duty in the offensive backfield.

SPORTS in Princeton

Sophomore Selection Difficult. Naming the top ten members of a football class on the basis of a single season's play before they reach the varsity is an easy assignment. Freshman coach Walter "Pep" McCarty takes a shot at it every year, and is invariably right on the great majority of the players he singles out.

Of the ten he named a year ago as "Sophomores to Watch," two won starting positions on defense; two others made major contributions in the offensive backfield; four saw varying degrees of action in reserve capacities and will have a good shot at starting jobs this fall. On the other hand, the remaining two are no longer playing the sport here.

McCarthy tabbed John Hess and Chris Waugh as topflight players, and naturally included McCullough and Chris Montgomery as the pick of the sophomore backs in 1968. The latter, switching from tailback to understudy Ellis Moore at fullback, averaged better than seven yards per carry and joined the other three as letter winners.

Of the linemen, McCarthy picked guard Steve Saner had the best season once he shook off the lingering effects of a virus that hit him at Blairstown. Dave Dirks was a reserve tackle, Bob Liddell had two varsity holdovers ahead of him at center, but Pete Hauck won a letter at wingback even though he understudied the heavily used regular, Jim Kokoski. Brad O'Brien, who worked his way up to second on the depth chart behind defensive tackle Tim McCann, and Bud Nesbit, a defensive end, are not on the 1969 roster.

Freshmen Above Average. The Class of 1972, like its predecessor, won four of its six games and gave indication of marked ability on the part of a number of its players. Victories were scored over Rutgers, 13-6; Cornell, 21-6; Columbia, 14-6; and Yale, 54-12. The losses were to Penn, 20-18, and, for the second year in a row, to Harvard, 7-0.

Of the ten players rated "Sophomores to Watch" this fall, four were used on offense, four on defense and two saw action on both platoons. Also worth mentioning is the fact that five of them were captains of their school teams and eight of them won letters in one or more additional sports.

By positions, these are the ten recorded the highest potential:

Ends: Watch for Steve Sikora to make his presence felt, although probably in a reserve capacity for his first year on the varsity because the veteran Tom Hutchinson, a senior letterman, returns at defensive left end. Sikora, 6-3, 225, started at that position for the freshmen last year and showed both strength and agility after earning scholastic All American honors in the football conscious state of Ohio.

Sikora paired with John Holden, who has not one but two letternen ahead of him on the right side of the defensive line. A top schoolboy product from Illinois, he stands 6-1 and weighs 195.

Tackles: Three — one on defense, two on offense. The former is 18-year old John O'Donovan, 6-3, 225 and still growing. Exceptionally strong despite his ranking as the youngest member of the 60-odd players who will head for Blairstown, he will get a shot at the defensive tackle berth vacated by the veteran Tim McCann.

One of the biggest of the sophomore crop is 240-lb. Jeff Smith, a starter at inside tackle in the freshman single wing alignment last fall. Rated by McCarthy as "a good, solid performer," he comes up to the varsity without a letterman ahead of him and figures to see a considerable amount of action.

Charlie Rosachi, 6-3, 215, was outside tackle last fall. Fast for his size and rated a good blocker, he'll be among the numerous candidates hoping to fill one of the many vacancies on the offensive line. A switch to guard for him is a possibility.

Guards: The best player on the 1968 freshmen (as winner of the Lourie Award) was 220-lb. Phil Barbacela, who called the defensive signals from his position as a linebacker. Rated by the coaches as "a player who knows what the game is all about," he may be the man to take over at middle guard for the graduated Dick Sandler, one of the top defensive players at Princeton in the past decade.

On offense, the pick of the sophomore guards is 195-lb. Emil Deliere, who has the versatility to have won high school letters (in Cannonsburg, Pa.) in football, wrestling and baseball. Equipped with fine speed, he has strength and good blocking ability. Unlike other sophomores, however, Dehere has three varsity lettermen ahead of him

Centers: None

Backs: Three, two who went both ways for the freshmen last fall. One who appears sure to fit into the 1969 picture is 185-lb. Rod Plummer, last year's captain who played both tailback and in the defensive secondary. His performance in the latter capacity has earned him a rating as "one of the best tacklers at Princeton in some time." In the pre Blairstown planning, he is slated for duty in the offensive backfield as one of the quarterbacks who will direct the Tigers' multiple offense this season.

John Bjorkland, 6-1, 185, was the ranking tailback for the Class of 1972. Equipped with good speed, broken-field ability and rated a good passer, he is scheduled for reserve duty behind junior Brian McCullough. Bjorkland was three times a scholastic captain at North Shore H. S., Glen Head, N. Y. — twice in football and once in basketball — and also played baseball.

Like Plummer, Mike Loger played on both sides of the line last fall, carrying the ball as a fullback and serving also as a cornerback on defense. Solidly built at 6 feet, 190 pounds, he is currently listed as one of those who will battle for the honor of spelling Captain Ellis Moore at fullback.

Of the ten sophomores, possibly Barbaccia at middle guard and O'Donovan as tackle on defense; Jeff Smith at offensive tackle and Plummer in the offensive backfield are likely to fit into the 1969 picture fairly quickly.

End Steve Sikora, too, may come close to sharing the duties on the left side of the defensive line with Tom Hutchinson. Of them all, Barbaccia could be the one to crack the starting lineup on a combined basis of his ability and the lack of varsity holdover strength at the middle guard position where he is currently listed.

BOLSTER LOWERS RECORD

In 100-Meter Breaststroke. Andy Bolster set a new state record in the 100 meter breaststroke for boys 11/12 in the Junior Olympic Swim Championships of the New Jersey Association of the AAU held last weekend.

Andy's time of 1:24.3 bettered the old mark of 1:26.0 by almost two seconds. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bolster, 124 Parkside Drive.

The two day event was held Saturday at Lake Mohawk in Sparta and on Sunday at the Northland Pool in Livingston. Six finalists — the survivors of a series of summer long qualifying meets — participated in each event.

A second record was set by the Princeton YMCA "A" team in the boys 11/12 200 meter free relay.

Andy Bolster, Jerry McMahon, Mike Reock and David Mancino were clocked in 2:01.2 — three tenths of a second faster than Passaic, which earlier had set a new qualifying record of 2:04.4. The old record was 2:06.0. The same four finished second in the 200 meter medley relay with a time of 2:21.8.

ed fifth overall among a field of 20, and the girls who competed from Princeton are all members of the Princeton YMCA Flying Fish. The boys missed capturing fourth by one point.

Mancino also brought Princeton its third first-place medal when he won the 100-meter butterfly in 1:13.2. In addition, he placed second in the 200-meter individual medley with a clocking of 2:47.9. Other second place winners: Greg Lauffer, boys 10 and under, 50-meter free, 34.9; Bill Crell, boys 15/17, 200-meter breaststroke, 2:55.9; and Dede Hennemann, girls 11/12, 100-meter free, 1:11.8.

Capturing third-place medals for Princeton were Mike Martin, 15/17, 200-meter breaststroke, 2:56.5, and Andy Bolster, 200-meter individual medley, 2:55.9.

All fourth-place winners were in the 13/14 age division. They are Chuck Hector, 100-meter breaststroke, 1:23.3; Margaret Martin, 100-meter breaststroke, 1:28.5; Dede Hennemann, 100-meter butterfly, 1:28.5; and Carrie Bolster, 200-meter freestyle, 2:29.6. Maura Dorgan, Jinni Ball, Margaret Martin and Carrie Bolster swam the 200 meter medley relay in 2:22.2

Guy Dorgan, John Hartman, Andy O'Hara and Greg Lauffer were clocked in the boys 10-and-under 200-meter medley in 2:58.3 for fifth place. O'Hara also placed fifth in the 50-meter free, as did Lauffer in the 100-meter free. Mike Reock placed fifth in the boys 11/12 50-meter free.

Those who finished in sixth place — last in the meet but still sixth best in the state in their age bracket — were: Jerry McMahon, boys 11/12, 50-meter free; Andy O'Hara, 100-Meter, freestyle; Carol Wagner, girls 10 and under, 50-meter freestyle and Tom McKenna, boys 13/14, 50-meter freestyle and 200-meter freestyle.

Also, Debbie McClain, Libby Kappes, Mary McMahon and Mary Bolster, 10 and under, 200-meter medley relay, and Karen Asterino, Carol Wagner, McMahon and McClain, 10 and under 200-meter freestyle relay.

Eight-year-old Guy Dorgan and Tom Bolster, Andy O'Hara, 9, and Bobby Heil, 7, finished sixth in the 200-meter freestyle for boys 10-and-under.

ACCELERATOR UPSET

McGraw-Hill In First. ERC gave McGraw-Hill a big assist toward finishing first in the eastern division of the Business Softball Division, when it upset first-place Accelerator 4-3 last week. McGraw-Hill had two games left this week, against ETS and EMR, and could wrap up first by winning both.

In the western division, a game between NCA and RCA Labs A Tuesday night, was to have decided whether NCA finished first or would be forced into a playoff. If needed, a single-game playoff will be held Thursday to determine the first-place winner.

NCA played and won three games in three days last week to raise its record to 13-2. On Tuesday, it took the measure of Hopewell TV, 15-6. The following night it routed Shell, 15-4, and Thursday it edged Firmenich, 5-3. RCA managed two victories to remain one game behind, defeating Firmenich, 10-4, and blanking Astro, 3-0. Ron Infanti went three for four, including a home run and a double to pace RCA against Firmenich.

RCA Labs B, which may have the most momentum going into the playoffs, assured itself of a third-place finish, winning its seventh straight, 4-3, over ETS. Tom Ward turned in another fine relief job for Bob Nielsen, coming on in the second inning and pitching the rest of the way. Bill Procaccini had three hits for the winners, and Tom Connelly and Joe Santosusso both collected two.

In its only game last week, McGraw-Hill won its 12th, knocking off Cyanamid, 12-2. Joe Dey and Ange Vasti contributed four hits apiece to the winners' 20-hit attack. Jim Ma-

Live below your means.
If you'd like to get around the high cost of living, we have a suggestion:
Cut down on the high cost of getting around.
And buy a Volkswagen. It's only $1799*
That's around $1200 less than the average amount paid for a new car today. (Leave it in the bank. More's coming.)
A VW saves you hundreds of dollars on upkeep over the years.
It takes pints, not quarts, of oil.
Not one iota of antifreeze.
And it gets about 27 miles to the gallon. The average car (thirsty devil that it is) only gets 14.
So the more you drive, the more you save.
And chances are, you'll drive it for years and years. (Since we never change the style, a VW never goes out of style.)
Of course, a VW's not much to look at. So a lot of people buy a big flashy car just to save face.
Try putting that in the bank.

The New Jersey Jaycees, sponsors of the event, released 1,000 tickets at $4 apiece for sale beginning last Friday. The game has been a sell-out almost every year since the series began in 1962. The Eagles hold a 4-3 edge, and have won the last four straight.

EMR continued to demonstrate its new-found success, beating FMC, 8-4, for its second win of the season. In other games, Astro beat Hopewell TV, 13-6, but lost to Shell, 11-7. That combined with the shutout by RCA A, left Astro with the possibility of losing fourth place to Shell, and a spot in the playoffs.

In addition to its triumph over Accelerator, ERC also edged Cyanamid, 4-2, putting itself into a fourth place tie with the losers. If the teams end in a tie, a playoff game will be held Thursday also.

TIGERS HOME FOR 7

In 12-Game Soccer Schedule. Princeton University's 1969 soccer team, captained by high-scoring Steven C. Davidson, will play a 12-game schedule this season — seven of them at home.

The first home game for coach Jack Volz's booters will be September 26 with Lincoln University. The Tigers will open their season three days earlier at Lafayette.

Other home games will be against Swarthmore, Rutgers, Pennsylvania, Brown, Yale and Dartmouth. In addition to Lafayette, the Tigers will face Columbia, Haverford, Cornell and Harvard away.

BLUE NIPS NAVY

For Lacrosse Crown. A goal by Jon Pettit with about a minute remaining proved to be the biggest of the season as Blue defeated Navy last week, 2-1, in the championship game of the Princeton Summer Lacrosse League.

According to league commissioner Hawley Waterman, Pettit's shot hit the pipe of the cage and bounced back. Pettit scooped up the rebound, fired again and scored. "It was a nice play," commented Waterman.

Dave Bushnell had put Blue ahead, 1-0, in the first period, but Gary Bashuk of Navy scored his team's only goal in the second to tie it. Matt Alexander was credited with an assist.

In a consolation game "played ed for fun," Maroon topped Red, 6-2. Scoring two goals each for Maroon were Don Pettit, Pete McGinness and David Keefe. Al Woodward accounted for both Red goals.

Final standings list Blue with a 6-1 mark, Navy 5-2, Maroon 3-4, and Red 0-7.

FIRST PLACE CLINCHED

By Conte's Bar. With four games remaining, Conte's Bar of Witherspoon Street has clinched first place in the Princeton Adult Softball League with a 10-4 victory last week over the Outlaws. The team has a perfect 12-0 mark.

The remaining contests are makeups of rained-out games. These are scheduled to end Monday, after which playoffs will begin to determine the league champion.

Starting Friday night at 9:30 at Hetzel Field in Trenton, Conte's will participate in the Mercer County Softball Tournament, competing against the best teams in the County. Its first round opponent will be the New Jersey State Hospital.

HARRISON IS 9-0

In Playground Softball. In the final standings of the Princeton playgrounds softball competition, Harrison Street ended with a perfect 9-0 record, followed by Grover Avenue, 6-3.

Witherspoon was 4-5, Community Park was 3-6 and Riverside was 2-7 to complete the senior division. Grover Park won the junior division.

HUNTING SEASONS SET

Rails Open Labor Day. New Jersey fall hunting seasons for woodcock, sea ducks and rail have received final approval from the State Fish and Game Council.

Rail season will open the fall hunting calendar on Labor Day, September 1, running through November 8. A reduced bag limit on clapper and king rail will prevail, of 5 daily, 10 in possession, because of continued poor breeding on New Jersey coastal marshes.

The limit on sora and Virginia rails will be increased to 25 daily or in possession, and 15 gallinules daily, 30 in possession may be taken during this season under federal regulations. Shooting hours will be ½ hour before sunrise to sunset.

Woodcock hunting will run from October 4 through December 6, with shooting hours of sunrise to sunset. Sole exceptions will be that there will be no woodcock hunting on November 7, the day before small game season, and hunting on November 8 may not start before 9 a.m.

A special State woodcock stamp must be affixed to the hunting license before the small game season. Bag limit will be five daily, 10 in possession.

Sea ducks, scoter, eider and old squaw, will again be available during a special long season, from September 25 through January 10. This season will apply only on waters of the Atlantic Ocean, defined as in recent years.

Generous limits of 7 daily, 14 in possession will again apply to these abundant species during the special season and will probably apply to these ducks statewide during the regular duck season. Shooting hours will be ½ hour before sunrise to sunset, and a Federal Duck Stamp is required.

PLANS DISCUSSED

On Hopewell School Growth. Students, teachers and community representatives have met regularly this summer to formulate plans and make suggestions for the anticipated secondary growth of the Hopewell Valley Regional School District.

Members of the recently established planning committee are in the process of helping to establish an education plan for the long range curriculum and building facilities for the district's second ary students.

The overall planning committee consists of 13 sub committees, each dealing with a specific department in sec ondory education. Some of the sub committees have been meeting on a regular weekly basis throughout the summer. The sub committees are divided with equal representation of student elected members, faculty specialist members and community members who have specific interests in spe cial areas.

Faculty members are serving as chairmen of each subdivision. President of the Board of Education, Mr Philip Alampi, is serving as general chairman of the entire committee.

The Board of Education feels confident that concrete proposals will germinate with the cross section of representatives on this study group. "We are certain that the endeavors of this group will result in a plan that will be ideal for our future growth needs," Mr. Alampi stated. "We are grateful to the members of the entire committee for giving their time and enthusiasm to this district project."

PICNIC TO BE HELD

By Pennington Fire Co. The Pennington Fire Company will hold its 16th annual pic nic Saturday, September 8, from 1 to 7, on Charlie Rog er's farm on Federal City Road, Hopewell Township. The picnic will be held rain or shine.

The firemen will serve steamed and raw clams, hot dogs, hamburgers, sausage, sweet corn, draught and birch beer. There will be door prizes, games, music by the Blawenburg Concert Band, and "locomotive" rides for the children.

Tickets may be obtained at the picnic grounds or in advance from any Pennington Fire Company member. For further information call Jess Scarborough, 737 1608 or Ed Leszcynski, 896 0892.

FOUR TRUSTEES NAMED

At Institute. The Institute for Advanced Study has announced the election of four new members of the Board of Trustees. A. Adrian Albert, Michael V. Forrestal, Howard C. Petersen and William W. Scranton.

Mr. Albert, Dean of the Division of the Physical Sciences of the University of Chicago and Eliakim Hastings Moore Distinguished Service Professor, is an internationally known mathematician who has been President of the American Mathematical Society and Chairman of the Section of Mathematics for the National Academy of Sciences. He is one of the few academicians to serve on the Board.

Mr. Forrestal, a partner in the law firm of Shearman and Sterling in New York City, has had wide experience in government as well as in the legal and business world. He is also President of the Metropolitan Opera Guild and a Director of the Metropolitan Opera Association.

Mr. Petersen is Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of the Fidelity Bank in Philadelphia. A lawyer, he has served as special assistant to the President on Trade Legislation in 1961-1962 and had previously served in the War Department during and immediately after World War II.

Mr. Scranton, formerly member of Congress and Governor of the State of Pennsylvania, practices law in Scranton. He is a Trustee of Yale University.

The Institute, founded in 1930, is dedicated to the pursuit of advanced learning and scientific exploration in an unstructured, informal atmosphere. Its academic membership includes 23 permanent professors and about 120 visitors who cover the whole spectrum from postdoctoral fellows to senior scholars and scientists. The primary purpose is the pursuit of advanced learning and exploration in fields of pure science, and high scholarship to the utmost degree that the facilities of the institution and the ability of the faculty and students will permit.

The Board of Trustees has 15 members.

UNHAPPY WITH NIXON

Thompson Poll Indicates. Some 51% of those constituents in the Fourth Congressional District who responded to Congressman Frank Thompson, Jr.'s legislative questionnaire indicated they were dissatisfied with the pace of the Nixon Administration in meeting the nation's major social and economic problems. They think the Administration is moving too slowly. However, 27.9% expressed themselves as satisfied with the pace; the remaining 20.7% had no opinion either way.

In a questionnaire mailed several weeks ago, Congressman Thompson sought his constituents' opinions on the major issues confronting the Congress and the nation. Representative samples of the returns were tabulated by computers at Princeton University.

A high degree of concern was indicated with the continuing conflict in Vietnam. Forty-eight percent of those responding said that in the event of a breakdown in the Paris peace talks, we should gradually withdraw our forces, while another 20% said we should get out immediately. Only 21% favored increased military activity should the talks fail.

Coincident with the expressed concern at our continued involvement in Vietnam was deep dissatisfaction with the present operation of the Selective Service System. Of those who responded, 72% favored reform of the draft system or its abolition in favor of a volunteer army.

As was reflected in the recent vote in the Senate, there is considerable opposition to President Nixon's proposal to deploy anti-ballistic missiles in certain areas of the United States. The recorded expression in the questionnaire returns was 47.2% opposed; 36.3% in favor; and 16.5% with no opinion on the issue.

On the domestic front, the most frequently cited issues as "very important" were inflation and the crime rate. Sixty-nine percent of the respondees over 40 cited crime as a major public issue; while 43% of those under 40 thought crime to be of major concern. A full 55% favored increased federal funds for education; 45.8% favored more money for public housing; and 41.9% thought more ought to be spent on highway construction, land and water resources, and other public works. Conversely, only 12.5% expressed the view that we ought to spend more for military projects, and only 7.9% thought more ought to be spent in Vietnam.

Respondees expressed a high degree of support for election law reform: 78% favored elimination of the electoral college for direct election of the President and Vice-president. Similarly, 57% favored a national primary for the nomination of presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

However, opinion was almost evenly divided on lowering the voting age to 18 with 47.8% in favor and 45.3% opposed. The response here was weighted by the age of the respondee: 56% of persons under 40 favored a lower voting age while 43% of those over 40 did so.

CAREER PROGRAM HELD

For Black Youths. An experimental program whose goal is to acquaint black or ban youth with career opportunities in technical areas is currently underway at Princeton University. For the 22 Princeton and Trenton high school youths employed at the university for the past two months, their summer jobs are only a part of a relationship that could continue to involve them with the University and with nearby Mercer County Community College (MCCC) for the next three or four years.

Underwritten by a two-year $43,756 grant from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, the program was designed by Princeton and MCCC administrators and provides a technical job at Princeton for two or three summers while each youth is in high school. During each summer, and during counselling follow-up throughout the school year, Princeton and MCCC personnel will attempt to acquaint the enrollees with the opportunities for further technical training at MCCC after high school graduation.

At MCCC, which has an "open door" admissions policy for all Mercer County high school graduates, officials are set to provide specialized guidance assistance, if needed and if the program participants choose to attend. After the youths complete their work at MCCC — a two-year program, in most cases — they will be offered assistance in finding permanent jobs.

Two reasons have been given for the program's heavy emphasis on technical employment and training: first, the general shortage of technical personnel in research and development areas across the country; and second, the general under-representation of Negroes in these fields. The program aims to develop basic skills in laboratory procedures and seeks to acquain; the participants with equipment and materials.

As outlined by James H. Barbour, Jr., an administrative associate in Princeton's Office of Personnel Services, and director of the program's Princeton phase, "The program is an experiment to discover if youths with no previous awareness of technical work can, through unpressured exposure, intensified guidance and close supervision, be oriented to career lines in which Negroes now have minimal participation."

The program grew out of a smaller effort, begun last year and financed entirely by the University, which aimed solely at providing summer jobs. Thirteen of the 22 participants held jobs under last year's program. A follow-up of last summer's employees indicates that the program is succeeding in raising the aspirations and accomplishments of those who participated.

The Princeton participants include: Courtney Irving, James A. Phox, Jr., Glenn Price, and Larry Spruill.

In addition to Mr. Barbour, the other designers of the program are Bruce H. Edwards, assistant director of personnel services at Princeton and John J. Connolly, assistant to the president and director of community and extension services at MCCC.

HAVING LAWN TROUBLE?

Come to Rutgers Saturday. Step-by-step demonstrations of making a new lawn and renovating an old one will be featured at Rutgers University this Saturday during the Central Jersey Lawn Clinic and Demonstration.

The program, to be held on the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science campus at the turf research plots on College Farm Road near Route 1, will begin at 10 a.m. and be repeated at 2 p.m.

The first event is a brief tour to acquaint visitors with the different types of lawn grasses. Detailed demonstrations of how to make a new lawn or renovate an old lawn will follow.

College plant specialists and county agents will man a clinic to answer lawn questions. Those with a special lawn problem, may bring a square-foot sample of turf for a free diagnosis. The clinic will also include a display of the weeds most common to lawns.

TOWN TOPICS goes into every home and place of business in Princeton. By their own figures, no other newspaper does half as well.

IT WAS A GREAT SUMMER: The Princeton summer playgrounds program has officially ended, but the memory lingers on. Here, in a carrom game at Community Park, are Chris Marrow Keith Wood and Darnell Burford. Chris enjoys carrom, but has an added distinction: he won second place in the peanut hunt.

LEARN ABOUT PALESTINE

From Expert on Holy Land. A public lecture with slides on the archeeology of Palestine will be presented by Professor Charles T. Fritsch at the Princeton Theological Seminary Campus Center, 7:30 p.m., Thursday, August 21, as part of the Seminary's summer language program.

The Reverend Mr. Fritsch, Professor of Old Testament at the Seminary, is a native of Allentown, Pa. He received a B.A. from Muhlenberg College, a Th.B. from Princeton Theological Seminary and a Ph.D. from Princeton University.

His interest in Biblical archaeology has repeatedly led him to excavations and tours in the Holy Land. He is the author of several books and articles in his subject area.

STUDY CENTER HELD

At Unitarian Church. Princeton Study Center conducted its summer program at the Unitarian Church again this year, with 40 children enrolled.

The youngsters, recommended by the Special Services staff of the Princeton Regional Schools, made full use of the church's new facilities. Activities included photography, sewing, leather work, drama, folk dancing, insect collecting, typing, and arts and crafts.

There were history tours and, cooking projects, movies and swimming, both recreational and instructional.

Mary Jane Schomp directed the "Younger Center" and Dave Anderson led the "Older Center," each group with 20 children and six staff members. The program was partly funded by public donations to the Princeton Study Center and by the Regional Schools.

The six-week program worked to change the children's attitudes toward learning, providing a semi-recreational learning experience and trying to involve the youngsters to the point where they developed a willingness to respond. The youngsters who had been in the program in previous years were encouraged to help the newer children.

Beef On The Menu

Donation is $3.25. The Rev. Edward Smith is minister.

Vegetable Harvest Hurt

Excessive rainfall during July reduced the production outlook for several important New Jersey vegetables and for blueberries, according to the New Jersey Crop Reporting Service.

Vegetables for which production estimates are now below a month ago include tomatoes, sweet corn, cucumbers, escarole and onions.

On the other hand, production prospects for field crops and for peaches and apples were not adversely affected, although quality was reduced in some cases. Harvest of all crops has been hampered.

July rainfall was 86% above normal in North Jersey and nearly 250% times normal in Central and South Jersey.

A LITTLE GEM . . . high on a hill, with a wonderful view, here is a 200-year-old frame & Colonial which has been restored and renovated in superb taste. Grand old shade trees, beautiful landscaping, semi-enclosed terrace. Living room with fireplace, new powder room, sitting room, modern kitchen with screened porch for breakfast. Upstairs, 2 bedrooms, nursery (or den), bath. One of Hopewell Township's most perfect little homes . . . quite dreamy! $37,500

GRIGGSTOWN . . . on a wooded acre, this 8-year-old brick and frame one-story dwelling was custom-built for the owners. 3 bedrooms, 1 full bath and 1 bath roughed-in, but not finished. Living room with fireplace, dining room, modern eat-in kitchen, extra large closets. This house is in excellent condition and may be occupied immediately. On a quiet street in the country amid lofty trees, this property is only a short ride out of town, yet ideally secluded. $39,900

LIKE A LITTLE PRIVACY? Here's a darling house exactly suited to a romantic couple. Almost hidden behind its trees and hedges as you drive by you get a glimpse of its washed brick facade and a rugged shake roof that tells its story of quality and charm. Indoors, there's living room, dining room, den with beamed ceiling, music room, kitchen, and (upstairs) 4 bedrooms, 1 bath. $49,500

HORSES! . . . HORSES! — only a short drive from Princeton, here are 11 acres in a very nice, very horsey countryside. There's a big barn, too — a very solid structure that needs new siding, but is large enough for 4 box stalls and a tack room. The land is rolling, with many trees and shrubs, but it's not a forest — you can really look over your own acres and enjoy the view. The old farm house has a sun porch and a large paneled living room, a great big modern kitchen, bedroom and bath on the first floor. Upstairs: 2 bedrooms and an apartment which changed back into master bedroom and bath. $53,500

ONLY 10 MINUTES from Princeton, on one-and-a-half beautifully landscaped acres, this long, low, spacious home was designed to make living in the country a real pleasure. Living and dining rooms are large & airy, and any housewife will envy the owner of the marvelous kitchen, with lots of room for family breakfast and lunches. 3 big bedrooms, 2 full baths, a study (or 4th bedroom) 2 powder rooms. $68,900

GROWING FAMILY. . . . Here is a sprawling one-story house on 2 2/3 acres with a real expansion attic — plenty of space to add 2 more bedrooms and a bath when it becomes necessary. At present, the house has large (15'x 30') living room, with fireplace, separate dining room, big kitchen (17'9"x 14'), panelled study, a master bedroom 19'x15', two other bedrooms 14'x15, and huge closets with many built-ins. Two full baths. Maid's room has been converted into an extra kitchen, but could be a family room or 4th bedroom as there is a bathroom adjoining. $69,500
